Truman Asks Law To Bare Income Of High Officials

New Site Asked

Ridgway Gives Surprise Plan

TOKYO, Sept. 27—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway proposed in a note handed the Reds today that full-scale Korea armistice talks be reopened almost immediately at a new no man's land location near controversial Kaesong.

The United Nations supreme commander, seeking to cut the Gordian knot of complications blocking renewal of the conference, suggested a South Korean field near Songhyon as the new site.

Songhyon, a war-blasted village with only two or three houses left standing, lies six miles east-southeast of Kaesong and four miles below Parallel 38.

Ridgway's message, calling for a fresh start in the long-suspended cease-fire negotiations, was delivered to the Communists in Pan Mun Jom on the edge of the Kaesong neutral zone.

The UN command's chief liaison officer, Airforce Col. Andrew J. Kinney, handed the note to North Korean Col. Chang Chun-san, head of the Red liaison team. As he did so, Kinney said:

"I THINK THIS message from my commander to your commanders will remove some of our difficulties."

News correspondents reported from Pan Mun Jom that Chang was smiling as he took Ridgway's message from Kinney.

The dispatch however quoted a Red newsman, Alan Winnington, as warning Allied correspondents of possible Communist rejection of Ridgway's compromise proposal.

Winnington said the Red commanders considered Kaesong as "OK" and that removal of the truce conference from that city "might provide for more stalling on the part of the UN."

The UN military chiefs declared the new meeting place should "be kept free of armed troops" and that both sides "abstain from any hostile acts or exercise of authority over members of the other side."

Ridgway further proposed that "both delegations be prepared to return to discussion of Item Two of the agenda immediately following any discussion that may be needed to clarify physical and security arrangements."

* * *

AGENDA ITEM Two refers to the crucial question of where to draw a cease-fire line and buffer zone across the war-ridden Korean peninsula. The armistice parley was deadlocked over this issue when the Communists broke off the talks Aug. 23.

Meanwhile, massive new Red movements to the Korean front were attacked by hundreds of

Truman Fires Top Frisco Tax Agent, 8 Aides

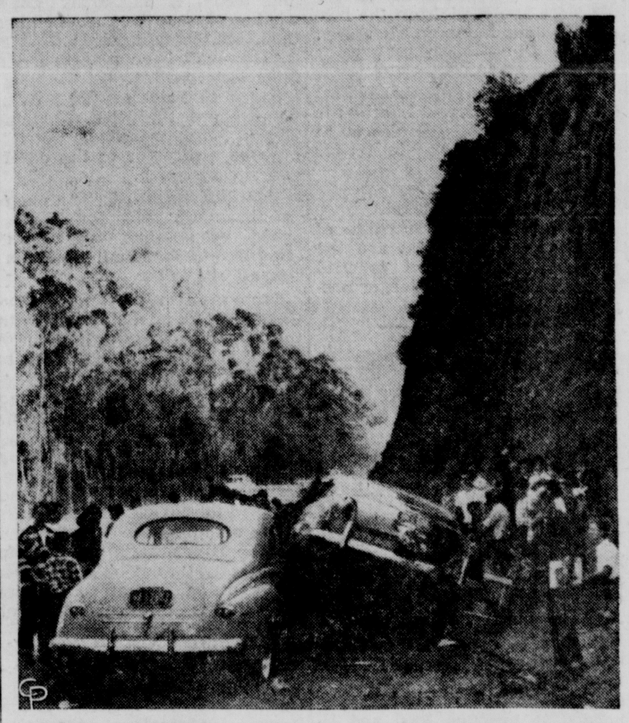

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 — President Truman today suspended James G. Smyth, collector of internal revenue in San Francisco, and eight other officials pending investigation of charges of incompetency.

The White House announced the suspension stating the President had taken the action "pending the outcome of investigation relating to incompetency in office."

Internal Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap told newsmen that indictments will be sought against two of the officials, Edwin M. Furtado, chief of the accounts section of the wage and excise tax division, and Miss Dorothy C. Frisbie, a principal auditor.

Dunlap said the others suspended are Paul V. Doyle, chief office deputy; John A. Malone, assistant chief of the income tax division; John J. Boland, chief field deputy; David F. Cunningham, deputy collector; Martin J. Tierney, chief of the wage and excise tax division; and Ignatius A. Beresford, assistant chief of the division.

President Truman announced that Smyth is also charged with failure to pay his own income taxes for a certain period.

79 SCHOOL PUPILS in a bus just missed being struck by the auto (right above) of Elmer L. Alexander, 57, when it catapulted over the 70-foot cliff (right) near Santa Monica, Cal., rolling over four times. Alexander was killed and Mrs. Berma Wallace, owner of auto at left, suffered cuts and bruises. The school bus had to make an emergency stop to avoid ramming the autos. Police said Alexander apparently lost control of his car.

PROMISE MADE TO 'ATONE'

'Jew-Baiting' Is Scorned By West Germany Chief

BONN, Sept. 27—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, in a challenge to the Communists for free nationwide elections, promised today to "atone" for the persecution of Jews under Nazism.

He said that his regime will "vigorously prosecute" all present-day Germans engaging in anti-Semitism. He also called upon Communist - ruled East Germany to make good its talk of unity and agree to free all-German elections under neutral or United Nations supervision.

The official Communist news agency ADN said that East Germany rejects Adenauer's nationwide election proposals.

The West German parliament approved the election proposal, with the Communists dissenting. The house also adopted a motion for free elections in divided Berlin as a forerunner to the nationwide balloting, which the Western powers will be asked to support.

ADENAUER, in a formal declaration to parliament, expressed his government's desire to make amends for the "inhumanities" of Adolf Hitler's regime in the persecution of Jewry.

He said that the penal code will be altered to provide "unrelenting prosecution" of all circles still engaged in Jew-baiting and inciting racial hatred.

In an obvious reference to neo-Nazi groups which have sprung up during the Allied occupation, Adenauer said:

'The government is conscious of the immeasurable suffering brought upon the Jews in Germany and occupied territories during the period of Nazism.

"The great majority of the German people abhorred these crimes and had no part in them.

"But unspeakable crimes were perpetrated by portions of the German people, which impose upon them the obligation to make moral and material amends."

Adenauer pledged cooperation with the government of Israel and representatives of world Jewery in bringing about restitution.

IN CONNECTION with the elections, Adenauer submitted a 14-point program to prevent what he called attempted Soviet "duplicity." It specifies that each party can nominate a candidate to represent all of Germany.

In addition, it calls for removal of all restrictions on movement between East and West for a period of three months before the balloting and for guarantees of full protection for all candidates and absolute freedom of information. Any violation would disqualify the entire electoral district where it occurs.

Lithofold-RFC Tieup Is Denied By Dem Chieftain

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle declared today that he had nothing to do with the government loan to American Lithofold Corp. and was told 'either you are perjuring yourself or you have been grossly slandered."

Boyle testified that charges that he got $8,000 from the St. Louis printing firm after the company received a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. are "unfounded, distorted and false."

He denounced the published allegations as "libelous and slanderous," as he appeared as the star witness before Senate Influence Committee.

Sen. McClellan, (D) Ark., after hearing Boyle's statements, commented:

"In my judgment either you are perjuring yourself or you have been grossly slandered."

Boyle told the senators that he was paid $1,250 in legal fees by Lithofold, but insisted that he never helped the concern get its RFC loans. He said that he has never requested a retraction from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Expense Cutting Up To President

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Sen. Byrd, (D) Va., threatened today to file a tax bill amendment to place the responsibility for cutting government expenses on President Truman rather than Congress.

The economy leader said he may offer a rider to the $5.5 billion tax increase bill which would require the President to submit three alternative "economy" budgets next year if his regular budget would create a deficit.

U.S. Urges Iran Cancel Ouster Rule

Offer Is Made Help Find Accord

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—The United States asked the Iranian government today to cancel its order for all British oil technicians to leave Iran.

At the same time, the U. S. renewed its offer to help find a solution to the Middle East oil crisis.

The American position was made known in a statement issued by State Department Press Officer Michael McDermott. It said:

"The Iranian situation has become more tense following the report that the Iranian government intends to cancel the residence permits of the British staff remaining at Abadan."

McDermott said that Great Britain also expressed its concern over the situation through British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks who discussed the matter with Secretary of State Acheson yesterday.

HE CONFIRMED that British Prime Minister Attlee has sent a note to President Truman and that the chief executive has sent a reply.

The State Department spokesman said:

"The United States has emphasized to both the Iranian government and the British government that it stands ready to render any assistance that it can in helping them to find a settlement to this difficult problem."

McDermott added that these views have been communicated to Iranian Premier Mossadegh but that no communication has been received from Tehran.

Meanwhile, the British cabinet, anxiously awaiting support from Washington, met in special session to decide on further measures in view of Iran's order

Our Pumpkins 'Last Forever,' Localites Claim

"In Circleville pumpkins last forever."

The statement was made Thursday by Ben Gordon, Circleville Pumpkin Show director. It was made with reference to the 1950 prize pumpkin now on display in the window of his store at the corner of Scioto and Main streets.

"It's a year old, and it's still in good shape," said Gordon proudly.

The 60-pound pumpkin was grown on the Herman Hardesty farm, Circleville Route 1.

Also attesting to the indestructibility of the Circleville pumpkin fruits is Mose Ammer, South Court street merchant.

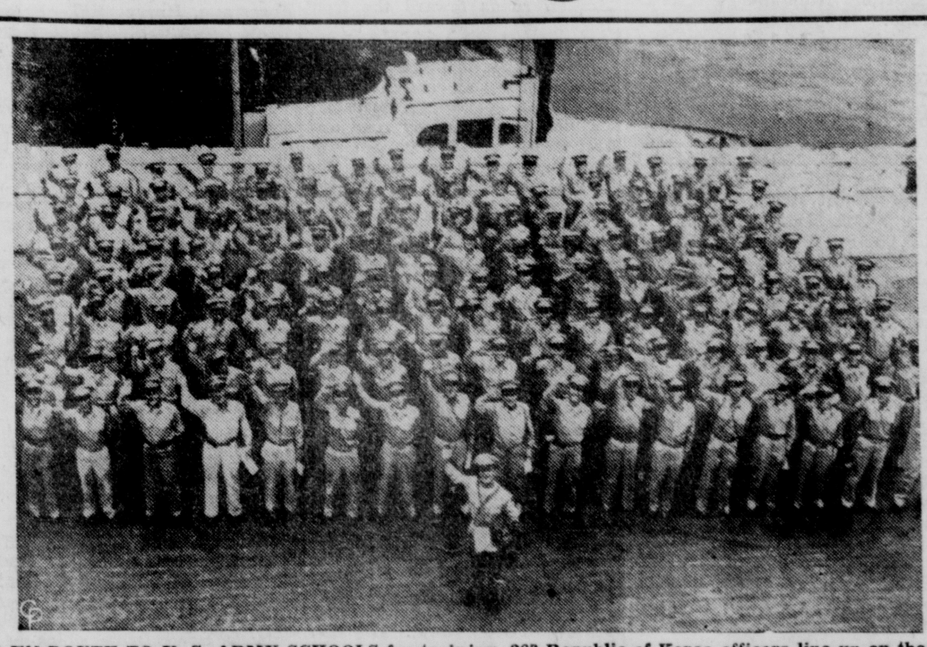

Ammer for the last two or three Pumpkin Shows has kept pumpkins saved from each preceding show stored in his basement to use during that year's show.

The merchant added, however, that he really wasn't sure how long they could be kept, since he throws them away after using them one year.

Solons Vote Cut On Exemptions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—The Senate voted 77 to 11 today to eliminate in January, 1953, the expense account tax exemptions now granted the President, vice-president and members of Congress.

The exemption would be wiped out after Mr. Truman's present term has expired and after the present terms of all House members and some senators.

McCarthy Is Heard

Solons Question Attack On Jessup

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Sen. McCarthy, (R) Wis., today labeled Ambassador Philip C. Jessup as being among those who are "either naive and dangerous or loyal to the Communist cause," but was continually challenged by investigating senators, including his fellow Republicans.

McCarthy opened his fight against Jessup's nomination as a United Nations delegate by going before a Senate committee with a sheaf of papers which he said will "show that Mr. Jessup does have a great affinity for Communist causes."

Jessup was in the audience as McCarthy testified, accompanied by State Department Legal Adviser Adrian Fisher. Jessup said he was ready to testify today if he is called.

McCarthy, under oath, began by submitting old letterheads of six organizations which listed Jessup connections and which McCarthy said have been officially labeled as Communist fronts, but he admitted that many groups with well-established records as anti-Communists also are listed.

Giles Takes Job As NL Chieftain

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27—Warren Giles, president of the Cincinnati Reds, today wired his acceptance for the post of National League president.

In a telegram to Philip K. Wrigley, league vice-president, Giles said he has been released from his present contract by Owner Powel Crosley Jr. and is ready to assume office Oct. 16.

The contract calls for four years at $50,000 and expenses annually.

385,000 TO BE TAPPED

Draft To Call Up 4-Fs, Childless Married Men

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—New draft regulations making some 385,000 childless husbands and 4-Fs subject to military service are expected to reach local boards within 10 days.

The regulations were signed yesterday by President Truman in accordance with the draft law amendments passed by Congress last June. Among others, they will affect about 235,000 married men without children.

The local boards will begin reclassifying their registrants so as to drop the draft age from 19 to 18 1-2. However, the pool of childless married men under 26 years of age must be exhausted before any of the 18-year-olds are called.

Putting the estimated 150,000 4-Fs into 1-A classification will result from the regulation lowering physical requirements to rock bottom level reached in World War II.

OTHER PROVISIONS of the new rules include one for a Universal Military Training program making young men between the ages of 18 and 19 liable for six months' military service. But it is unlikely that any UMT program will go into effect before next Summer.

Under the amendments signed by the President, conscientious objectors will no longer be deferred. Instead, they will be put into a special 1-O class and required to do special civilian work contributing to the national health, safety or interest if drafted.

Meanwhile, Selective Service headquarters announced the second series of draft deferment tests for college students will be given throughout the nation on Dec. 13 and April 24.

Local boards will have applications for the exams ready next week.

The applications must be in the mails by midnight Nov. 5 for those who want to take the Dec. 13 test and by midnight March 10 for those applying for the April 24 exam.

The new draft regulations allow 17-year-olds to volunteer for induction with the written consent of their parents.

3 Judges Hear Testimony On Police Graft

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 — District Attorney Miles F. McDonald today read before three judges grand jury testimony of Harry Gross that he paid New York policemen $1 million a year to protect his gambling operations.

The district attorney in reading from the 100-page digest of Gross' secret testimony unveiled—except for names—the full story of the bookmaker's 10-year alliance with corrupt police.

Gross told the Brooklyn grand jury investigating graft and corruption that he had a sliding scale of payments to policemen ranging from $25 a month to patrolmen to $350 a month to division heads.

In return Gross said he received protection for his $20 million a year organization and was tipped off about impending police shifts and shakeups so that his organization would not be left exposed to arrests by honest police officers.

The grand jury testimony disclosed also that Gross had told of bribing a woman employe in the legal department of the telephone company at the suggestion of his police cronies. In return, Gross said he was tipped off when the police were about to tap his phones.

Prompt Enactment Is Sought

Congressmen Listed By President, Too

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 — President Truman asked Congress today for legislation requiring all high-salaries federal employes to file annual reports on their total income, including gifts and loans.

The presidential request, made in a special message to Congress, apparently stemmed from disclosures in the government loan probe. It would cover all federal officials receiving salaries of $10,000 or more.

The chief executive recommended that such statements on total income filed by the government employs "should be made accessable to the public."

Mr. Truman told Congress he wants the legislation "promptly enacted." He said the requirement of annual filing of income reports should affect:

1. "ALL FULLTIME civilian presidential appointees, including members of the federal bench.
2. "All elected officers of the federal government, including members of the Congress.
3. "All other top officials and employes of the three branches of the government—say those receiving salaries of $10,000 or more plus flag and general officers of the armed services."
4. "The principle national party officials and employes" of the nation's major political parties.

The President further recommended that consideration be given to requiring all other government employes to file such a statement "if their outside income exceeds a specified amount—perhaps $1,000 a year.

The chief executive specifically stated that items not ordinarily counted as income such as gifts and loans should be included in the statements.

HE ASKED that penalties be provided in the legislation for willful violation which "should be equivalent to those for violation of the laws relating to the filing of income tax returns."

Mr. Truman told Congress he was making the recommendation in view of the widespread

4 Jap Holdouts On Guam Give Up After 7 Years

GUAM, Sept. 27—Four Japanese holdouts from World War II hostilities on Guam surrendered to island authorities today after a fifth member of their party convinced them the procedure was painless.

Taira Koshuin, 39, former civilian employe of the Japanese air force on Guam, was captured last night when he and his companions were surprised sleeping on a beach by a party of native night fishermen.

His fellows fled into the jungle to escape capture.

This morning Koshuin decided to help his compatriots give up and return to a peacetime Japan. He joined an expedition of U. S. Navy and Guam police personnel who headed by ship along the coast in search of the other Japanese.

While the vessel skirted close to the shore, Koshuin called over the ship's public address system for his Japanese friends to surrender. He told them they would be treated well by the Americans and could return soon to their homes in Japan.

Finally Koshuin, Navy Lt. Cmdr. C. R. Carli of Boston, a Japanese interpreter and one member of the Guam police put ashore in a rubber raft at a spot where the Japanese thought the others might be hiding.

The four were found in a cave atop a 300-foot cliff. They surrendered quietly at the end of their seven-year exile.

King Reported As Stronger, Appetite Better

LONDON, Sept. 27 — King George VI spent a restful night and awakened this morning in "stronger" condition to face what may be a critical fifth day following dangerous lung surgery.

The eighth bulletin on the 55-year-old king's condition declared that "after a better night, the king is stronger. His appetite is improving and progress continues."

The announcement served to allay to some degree the concern felt over the threat of severe internal bleeding which frequently occurs within a week after lung surgery.

Although the king has hurdled successfully the shock and immediate after-effects of his operation, medical experts have warned repeatedly of the danger of secondary hemorrhages five days after surgery.

Another crisis is possible five days from now when changes occur in the bloodstream which could lead to infection.

Don't Look Now, But Old Man Winter Is Poking Icy Finger Our Direction

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 — An Autumn cold wave packing a destructive Winter punch roared out of Canada and settled over the Midwest today.

The fury of the storm was heralded by tornado winds, heavy rain, snow and violent lightning bolts.

Advance blows of the cold air mass killed at least 11 persons and caused $1 million damage.

Weather forecasters predicted near-freezing temperatures today and tonight from North Dakota in the north to Indiana in the south.

States around the Great Lakes were hit hardest. Winds moving counter-clockwise around a low pressure area lashed Wisconsin and Michigan with tornado force yesterday afternoon.

In the dairyland state, seven persons were killed, five from one family, when the storm ripped through the countryside, leveling farm homes.

In Michigan, a twister caved in a concrete tavern wall in Bitely, near Grand Rapids, killing one woman and injuring three men.

High winds caused two other Wisconsin deaths earlier in the day. Two men drowned when their fishing boat overturned in the waters off Green Bay.

The Chicago area was drenched by a violent thunderstorm which set off an explosion in a suburban chemical plant and caused more than half a million dollars damage.

Thunder and lightning storms were reported throughout Northern Illinois and Indiana, killing at least one person and causing scores of traffic accidents on wet pavements.

Lowest temperature was the one-degree-above-freezing 33 reported in Fargo, N. D., and other points in Northern Minnesota. Parts of the Dakotas and Montana also had frost.

Forecasters warned that cold weather is on the way, will arrive well before many people are ready for it.

OTHER PROVISIONS of the new rules include one for a Universal Military Training program making young men between the ages of 18 and 19 liable for six months' military service. But it is unlikely that any UMT program will go into effect before next Summer.

Under the amendments signed by the President, conscientious objectors will no longer be deferred. Instead, they will be put into a special 1-O class and required to do special civilian work contributing to the national health, safety or interest if drafted.

Meanwhile, Selective Service headquarters announced the second series of draft deferment tests for college students will be given throughout the nation on Dec. 13 and April 24.

Local boards will have applications for the exams ready next week.

The applications must be in the mails by midnight Nov. 5 for those who want to take the Dec. 13 test and by midnight March 10 for those applying for the April 24 exam.

The new draft regulations allow 17-year-olds to volunteer for induction with the written consent of their parents.

3 Judges Hear Testimony On Police Graft

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 — District Attorney Miles F. McDonald today read before three judges grand jury testimony of Harry Gross that he paid New York policemen $1 million a year to protect his gambling operations.

The district attorney in reading from the 100-page digest of Gross' secret testimony unveiled—except for names—the full story of the bookmaker's 10-year alliance with corrupt police.

Gross told the Brooklyn grand jury investigating graft and corruption that he had a sliding scale of payments to policemen ranging from $25 a month to patrolmen to $350 a month to division heads.

In return Gross said he received protection for his $20 million a year organization and was tipped off about impending police shifts and shakeups so that his organization would not be left exposed to arrests by honest police officers.

The grand jury testimony disclosed also that Gross had told of bribing a woman employe in the legal department of the telephone company at the suggestion of his police cronies. In return, Gross said he was tipped off when the police were about to tap his phones.

Prompt Enactment Is Sought

Congressmen Listed By President, Too

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 — President Truman asked Congress today for legislation requiring all high-salaries federal employes to file annual reports on their total income, including gifts and loans.

The presidential request, made in a special message to Congress, apparently stemmed from disclosures in the government loan probe. It would cover all federal officials receiving salaries of $10,000 or more.

The chief executive recommended that such statements on total income filed by the government employs "should be made accessable to the public."

Mr. Truman told Congress he wants the legislation "promptly enacted." He said the requirement of annual filing of income reports should affect:

1. "ALL FULLTIME civilian presidential appointees, including members of the federal bench.

2. "All elected officers of the federal government, including members of the Congress.

3. "All other top officials and employes of the three branches of the government—say those receiving salaries of $10,000 or more plus flag and general officers of the armed services."

4. "The principle national party officials and employes" of the nation's major political parties.

The President further recommended that consideration be given to requiring all other government employes to file such a statement "if their outside income exceeds a specified amount—perhaps $1,000 a year.

The chief executive specifically stated that items not ordinarily counted as income such as gifts and loans should be included in the statements.

HE ASKED that penalties be provided in the legislation for willful violation which "should be equivalent to those for violation of the laws relating to the filing of income tax returns."

Mr. Truman told Congress he was making the recommendation in view of the widespread

4 Jap Holdouts On Guam Give Up After 7 Years

GUAM, Sept. 27—Four Japanese holdouts from World War II hostilities on Guam surrendered to island authorities today after a fifth member of their party convinced them the procedure was painless.

Taira Koshuin, 39, former civilian employe of the Japanese air force on Guam, was captured last night when he and his companions were surprised sleeping on a beach by a party of native night fishermen.

His fellows fled into the jungle to escape capture.

This morning Koshuin decided to help his compatriots give up and return to a peacetime Japan. He joined an expedition of U. S. Navy and Guam police personnel who headed by ship along the coast in search of the other Japanese.

While the vessel skirted close to the shore, Koshuin called over the ship's public address system for his Japanese friends to surrender. He told them they would be treated well by the Americans and could return soon to their homes in Japan.

Finally Koshuin, Navy Lt. Cmdr. C. R. Carli of Boston, a Japanese interpreter and one member of the Guam police put ashore in a rubber raft at a spot where the Japanese thought the others might be hiding.

The four were found in a cave atop a 300-foot cliff. They surrendered quietly at the end of their seven-year exile.

King Reported As Stronger, Appetite Better

LONDON, Sept. 27 — King George VI spent a restful night and awakened this morning in "stronger" condition to face what may be a critical fifth day following dangerous lung surgery.

The eighth bulletin on the 55-year-old king's condition declared that "after a better night, the king is stronger. His appetite is improving and progress continues."

The announcement served to allay to some degree the concern felt over the threat of severe internal bleeding which frequently occurs within a week after lung surgery.

Although the king has hurdled successfully the shock and immediate after-effects of his operation, medical experts have warned repeatedly of the danger of secondary hemorrhages five days after surgery.

Another crisis is possible five days from now when changes occur in the bloodstream which could lead to infection.

Don't Look Now, But Old Man Winter Is Poking Icy Finger Our Direction

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 — An Autumn cold wave packing a destructive Winter punch roared out of Canada and settled over the Midwest today.

The fury of the storm was heralded by tornado winds, heavy rain, snow and violent lightning bolts.

Advance blows of the cold air mass killed at least 11 persons and caused $1 million damage.

Weather forecasters predicted near-freezing temperatures today and tonight from North Dakota in the north to Indiana in the south.

States around the Great Lakes were hit hardest. Winds moving counter-clockwise around a low pressure area lashed Wisconsin and Michigan with tornado force yesterday afternoon.

In the dairyland state, seven persons were killed, five from one family, when the storm ripped through the countryside, leveling farm homes.

In Michigan, a twister caved in a concrete tavern wall in Bitely, near Grand Rapids, killing one woman and injuring three men.

High winds caused two other Wisconsin deaths earlier in the day. Two men drowned when their fishing boat overturned in the waters off Green Bay.

The Chicago area was drenched by a violent thunderstorm which set off an explosion in a suburban chemical plant and caused more than half a million dollars damage.

Thunder and lightning storms were reported throughout Northern Illinois and Indiana, killing at least one person and causing scores of traffic accidents on wet pavements.

Lowest temperature was the one-degree-above-freezing 33 reported in Fargo, N. D., and other points in Northern Minnesota. Parts of the Dakotas and Montana also had frost.

Forecasters warned that cold weather is on the way, will arrive well before many people are ready for it.

for expulsion of British oil experts.

The technicians were ordered to leave Iran by Oct. 4, at the latest.

The Iranian situation—which could mean an outbreak of war in the Middle East—occupied a full hour of the cabinet's time.

IN TEHRAN, formal individual notices were served upon 317 Britons, including 18 women at the Abadan oil refinery ordering them to get out within the next week.

Letters to this effect were signed by the temporary board of directors of the Iranian National Oil Board.

The Iranian parliament met to discuss the eviction notices ordered by Mossadegh and the possibility of British armed intervention to safeguard the rights of British nationals. The meeting adjourned, however, because a quorum was lacking.

Mossadegh, punctuating his address with sobs and apparent fainting spells, stood on a rickety chair outside the parliament building to address crowds that had gathered in the parliament square.

He implored Allah to "guide the British" and said: "Britain is not prepared to listen to any reasonable proposals."

On several occasions, his speech was interrupted by shouts of "death to the British."

Mossadegh then told the crowd: "Wherever you are—you are my parliament."

Hussein Makki, secretary of the Iranian Oil Board, climbed the chair after Mossadegh had finished. He bared his chest and said:

"I am shortly returning to the 'front' (the Abadan oil fields). My heart is ready to receive British bullets." He demanded that Iran insist upon the recall to London of British Ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd.

Officers Accuse Three Men Of Drunk Driving

Three men accused of drunken driving were placed on bonds of $500 each Thursday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller, pending disposition in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Arrested on accusations of driving while drunk Wednesday night were Fred Harold Wickerham, 29, of 159 West Main street; Paul Stonerock, 24, Williamsport Route 1; and Emerson Woodcock, 34, of Columbus.

Wickerham and Woodcock were arrested in Circleville by Officers Bob Temple and Charles Smith, while Stonerock was arrested on Route 752 by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

All three men were to have been heard on bills of information late Thursday in common pleas court.

May Be Private, But No Secret

Married men who are registered in the local Selective Service office, and whose wives are expecting children, are required to inform draft officials of that fact.

Selective Service authorities here said the notice must be given in order that the husband can be reclassified.

And it must be done before the child is born, officials added.

Lovett Says No Magic Way To Win A War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Defense Secretary Lovett contained his enthusiasm for fantastic new weapons with a caution that tanks and infantry are still necessary for national security.

Defense Department military leaders were reported disturbed lest statements of Sen. McMahon, (D) Conn., concerning atomic artillery and guided missiles should cause a letdown in the $60 billion-a-year defense building program.

Lovett said at his first news conference since assuming office that "a guided missile on the drawing board or at the proving ground can't win 'Heartbreak Ridge' in Korea tomorrow morning."

The new defense secretary added:

"There is enough truth in both the weapons development stories and in the progress reports on atmoic energy to encourage a very optimistic outlook for improved American armament.

'However, until new weapons and new military applications of atomic energy are available for field use, our national safety depends upon improved conventional weapons in ample quantity and sufficient trained and equipped ground, naval and air forces."

He continued:

"There is no new, inexpensive or magic way to win wars in the near future."

Allied planes and American pilot shot up two more Red jets in the third straight day of record jet battles.

In ground fighting, Allied troops held a newly-won peak on the east front, along the coastal flank of which Red forces were blown out of hilltop bunkers by shellfire from the Battleship New Jersey.

The "Big J" rained more than 95 tons of high-explosives on enemy positions Wednesday.

U. S. Fifth Airforce pilots reported sighting nearly 3,000 Red vehicles moving down North Korean roads toward the front during the night hours up to dawn Thursday.

Then waves of planes unleashed a daylong air assault aimed at what a spokesman described as "increasing enemy road and rail traffic along the main supply arteries," especially the routes from Pyongyang to the west-central sector.

The Fifth Airforce announced Thursday night at its planes in 676 daylight sorties cut Red rail lines at 51 places and destroyed or damaged 64 rail cars, one locomotive and two supply dumps.

The airmen were credited also with destruction of a rail tunnel and the killing or wounding of 120 Communist troops.

Dewey Calls Out Grand Jury To Probe Politicians

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared today that political corruption involving "both political parties" exists in Staten Island and ordered an extraordinary grand jury investigation.

At the same time Edward A. Ruppell, Staten Island Republican political boss who had been assailed by several witnsess before the New York State Crime Commission, submitted his resignation as Richmond borough works commissioner.

Ruppell, who had admitted soliciting "contributions" from office holders to pay "political expenses," submitted his resignation to Borough President Cornelius A. Hall who had appointed him to the $10,000 a year post several years ago.

Witnesses before the crime commission had testified that the Staten Island GOP boss had sold liquor licenses, intimidated witnesses and allied himself with gamblers.

Man Pays Fine For Damaging Farmer's Fence

Pickaway County has registered its first arrest and conviction under the new law governing real property damages.

Joseph Sheets, 26, of Mt. Sterling Route 3, was fined $10 and costs under the new regulation for failing to report damage to a farm fence on Route 56.

Deputy Jack Dewey said the man's auto struck a fence at the Clarence List farm and that the man failed to report the incident.

"Any person who damages or destroys any real property along the highway, under the new law, has 24 hours in which to notify either the owner or the sheriff of the county in which the mishap happened," Dewey said, explaining the new regulation. "If he doesn't make the report, he is liable for arrest."

Lad, 10, Drowns In Toledo Creek

TOLEDO, Sept. 27—Frederick McConnel, 10, of Toledo drowned late yesterday in 10 Mile Creek while two brothers tried futiley to save him.

Frederick and his two brothers were playing along the creek when he fell off a pipe which juts into the water. Police said the water was 14 feet deep at that point.

Joseph, 6, and a younger brother tried to throw a rope to Frederick but their efforts failed. Screams attracted Robert Arendt, 19, who dived into the water. His legs became cramped from the chilly water and he had to give up the attempt.

'Scioto Cleanup' Panel Selected By Rotary Club

Durward Dowden has been named head of a special Circleville Rotary Club committee which has been given the task of campaigning for a "cleanup of the Scioto."

The committee, composed of 10 men, held a preliminary meeting this week to map its campaign against the "big ditch" pouring southward from Columbus.

Named committee officers with Dowden were Orsan Patrick, vice-chairman; and Frank E. Barnhill Jr., secretary.

Other members of the committee are Robert L. Brehmer, Robert L. Brehmer Jr., George Foresman, Harry Hill, Henry Reid, Howard Smith and Boyd Stout.

The panel selected Earl Smith as its legal adviser.

Ervin Leist, Circleville water and sewer department manager, appeared before the group to give background information on recent state and federal legislation regarding stream pollution and to describe methods of sewage disposal.

The committee did not reveal its immediate program, but indicated that various Columbus and state officials would be contacted.

County Buys 28 Pct. Of Bond Drive Quota

Judge William D. Radcliff, Pickaway County Defense Bond chairman, said Thursday that the county has attained 28.9 per cent of its $59,000 quota in the Defense Bond Drive which began Labor Day and ends Oct. 27. The totals announced were compiled from Federal Reserve Bank reports for the period from Sept. 3 through Sept. 15.

Nine counties attained 50 per cent or more during the first two weeks, and Noble County has reached 110.1 per cent. According to Merrill L. Predmore, state director, the sales reflect the same increase in buying marked by August sales throughout the state when August 1950 sales totals were exceeded this August by 13 per cent.

When August figures were announced last week Predmore said that extensive support by industry, labor and various volunteer groups, plus an intensification of interest in America's international picture, "apparently is having a marked effect upon the Defense Bond program."

Ranking counties, and their percentages of quotas attained, were: Noble, 110.1; Wyandot, 92.8; Harrison, 82.5; Williams, 76.9; Fulton, 56.6; Highland, 55.1; Champaign, 54.8; Wayne, 54.6; Morrow, 50.2, and Adams, 48.4.

Michigan Cop Plane Stays Overnight Here

A Michigan state police plane landed at Thomas airport west of Circleville Wednesday, weathering in here because of a low ceiling.

The Michigan patrol plane, a Beechcraft Bonanza four-placer, was piloted by Barney Forberg in a flight from Louisville, Ky.

State Patrolman W. D. Braucher of Ohio was flying the Ohio patrol plane in escort of the Michigan ship when the ceiling flattened down here, although the Ohioan took his plane into Columbus before landing.

The Ohio patrolman then returned by auto to Circleville, picked up the visiting state patrolmen and returned them to Columbus, where they spent the night.

The Michigan plane took off from the local airfield at about 10:30 a. m. Thursday to complete its flight into Detroit.

"charges and rumors" made in Congress and elsewhere of illegal or improper conduct by public officials.

The President said:

"In recent months, there has been something amounting to a deliberate effort to discredit the government service.

"Attempts have been made through implication and innuendo, and by exaggeration and distortion of the facts in a few cases, to create the impression that graft and corruption are running rampant through the whole government.

"I am told that people all around the country are getting a mistaken and a distorted impression that the government is full of evil-doers, full of men and women with low standards of morality, full of people who are lining their own pockets and disregarding the public interest.

"This is a terrible distortion of the true facts about our government. It would be tragic if our citizens came to believe it.

"I believe the best thing we can do to spike this effort to discredit government officials is to place all the facts right on the record. The facts themselves are the best cure for public doubts and uncertainties."

Ohio Potatoes To Be In Short Supply, Is Fear

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27—Whether you like them fried, mashed, boiled or baked—you'll find Ohio grown potatoes exceptionally good eating this Fall.

Eugene Wittmeyer, extension horticulturist at Ohio State university, today said homemakers would find the quality of the 1951 crop, now being harvested, to be even better than in past years.

But there will not be enough Ohio grown potatoes to go around. Ohio growers produce less than half of the potatoes consumed in the state, and the estimated 31,000 acres grown this year is about 8,000 acres less than that grown in 1950.

Wittmeyer credited the dry Summer and the grower tendency to produce a more mature potato for market as being chiefly responsible for the high quality of the current crop. While the dry weather improved the quality, it did not affect the yield too much as most of the large commercial growers are equipped for irrigation.

Average per acre yield of potatoes this year is expected to be around 190 bushels, about 10 bushels less per acre than last year. Wittmeyer said he has had several reports of yields ranging from 400 to 500 bushels per acre in Northeastern Ohio. One central Ohio grower turned in an unofficial estimate of 600 bushels per acre on a field that had been irrigated six times during the season.

Brannan Cites Importance Of Farm Machinery

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Agriculture Secretary Brannan boasts that the efficient mechanized farms of the United States need only one-eighth of the nation's manpower for agriculture.

The secretary said that this figure is far below that of other nations, particularly the Soviet Union, where a far larger percentage of the labor force is needed to produce food and fiber.

Brannan said this nation can be proud of the fact that farmers are geared up to the job of producing a good 50 per cent more per man-hour than they did before World War II.

He pointed out one-third more food and fiber is being produced this year than in 1940—with fewe. people in agriculture and only about the same acreage in cultivation.

Speaking before the Alabama State Agricultural Mobilization Committee in Montgomery, the cabinet member said this year American farmers are using $17.5 billion worth of farm machinery and equipment—two and a half times as much as in 1940.

can Activities Committee in 1944 and asked if McCarthy knew whether Jessup was a member then. McCarthy replied:

"I haven't been able to get a later letterhead."

Sen. Fulbright, (D) Ark., pointed out that Sen. Douglas (D) Ill., then a Chicago educator, was a director of the emergency conference.

McCarthy replied: "On each of these we will find some good people—but you won't find Professor Paul Douglas on all six."

Senators also challenged McCarthy's linking of Jessup with the "Coordinating Committee to Lift the Embargo" on arms to Spanish republicans merely because the organization quoted from a Jessup letter to the New York Times.

McCarthy defended the listing on grounds that Jessup, a professor of international law, had opposed the lifting of the embargo on shipments to Britain during the Hitler-Stalin pact, while advocating that it be raised on shipments to what McCarthy termed "the Communist areas of Spain."

Jessup was among faculty advisers to the American Law Students Association, which McCarthy said was cited by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee as having been affiliated with three other youth groups which it named as Communist fronts.

Chairman Sparkman, (D) Ala., pointed out that distinguished professors from seven law schools were listed. McCarthy replied:

"I call your attention to the last name, Abe Fortas of Yale. You will recall that he was Owen Lattimore's lawyer."

Fulbright asked: "Is he a Communist?"

McCarthy snapped back: "Oh, I don't know whether he pays dues."

Lausche Lauds Kentucky Judge's Gambling Battle

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27 — Gov. Lausche has complimented Kentucky Circuit Judge Joseph Goodenough of Newport for his action in ordering a special grand jury to return conspiracy indictments in the fight to clean up gambling across the Ohio river from Cincinnati.

The governor said that cooperation between the officials of Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio "can go a long way in breaking the back of the lawless operations of these gangsters." He added:

"I am sure the action taken by Judge Goodenough, if vigorously followed, will enure to the good of the citizens of Kentucky, as well as Ohio.

"The gambling syndicate, a number of whom are from Cleveland, have operated in towns along the Ohio river in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio. Their operations were brought to an end in Ohio, but they aim to continue outside of our state.

"It is my understanding they are hoping again to resume their operations in Ohio. We contemplate keeping after them with the view of terminating their reign of lawlessness and exploitation of gullible citizens through their lucrative operations."

which published charges that he had received $8,000 from the company.

BOYLE ADMITTED receiving a $150 camera from Cecil Green, head of Lithofold's Washington office. He said Green gave the camera "to my two daughters" one Christmas.

McCellan questioned Boyle about the Feb. 28, 1949, telephone call he made to Harley Hise, then RFC chairman, to set up an appointment for a Lithofold official.

McClellan declared, "personally I can see no wrong in it if it was only to make an appointment at their ('Lithofold officials') request, but if you manifested or implied you had an interest and wanted them to get special attention, then I think your conduct would be wrong."

Boyle replied, "I agree absolutely, 100 percent."

Boyle said that when he became a paid vice-chairman of the Democratic committee, he told his law clients he would no longer represent them.

In connection with the charges of the St. Louis paper, Boyle said there is the "possibility of some legal matter."

McClellan declared that while he approves freedom of the press, "I do not aprpove freedom of that character." He referred to the paper's charges against Boyle.

for expulsion of British oil experts.

The technicians were ordered to leave Iran by Oct. 4, at the latest.

The Iranian situation—which could mean an outbreak of war in the Middle East—occupied a full hour of the cabinet's time.

IN TEHRAN, formal individual notices were served upon 317 Britons, including 18 women at the Abadan oil refinery ordering them to get out within the next week.

Letters to this effect were signed by the temporary board of directors of the Iranian National Oil Board.

The Iranian parliament met to discuss the eviction notices ordered by Mossadegh and the possibility of British armed intervention to safeguard the rights of British nationals. The meeting adjourned, however, because a quorum was lacking.

Mossadegh, punctuating his address with sobs and apparent fainting spells, stood on a rickety chair outside the parliament building to address crowds that had gathered in the parliament square.

He implored Allah to "guide the British" and said: "Britain is not prepared to listen to any reasonable proposals."

On several occasions, his speech was interrupted by shouts of "death to the British."

Mossadegh then told the crowd: "Wherever you are—you are my parliament."

Hussein Makki, secretary of the Iranian Oil Board, climbed the chair after Mossadegh had finished. He bared his chest and said:

"I am shortly returning to the 'front' (the Abadan oil fields). My heart is ready to receive British bullets." He demanded that Iran insist upon the recall to London of British Ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd.

Officers Accuse Three Men Of Drunk Driving

Three men accused of drunken driving were placed on bonds of $500 each Thursday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller, pending disposition in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Arrested on accusations of driving while drunk Wednesday night were Fred Harold Wickerham, 29, of 159 West Main street; Paul Stonerock, 24, Williamsport Route 1; and Emerson Woodcock, 34, of Columbus.

Wickerham and Woodcock were arrested in Circleville by Officers Bob Temple and Charles Smith, while Stonerock was arrested on Route 752 by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

All three men were to have been heard on bills of information late Thursday in common pleas court.

May Be Private, But No Secret

Married men who are registered in the local Selective Service office, and whose wives are expecting children, are required to inform draft officials of that fact.

Selective Service authorities here said the notice must be given in order that the husband can be reclassified.

And it must be done before the child is born, officials added.

Lovett Says No Magic Way To Win A War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Defense Secretary Lovett contained his enthusiasm for fantastic new weapons with a caution that tanks and infantry are still necessary for national security.

Defense Department military leaders were reported disturbed lest statements of Sen. McMahon, (D) Conn., concerning atomic artillery and guided missiles should cause a letdown in the $60 billion-a-year defense building program.

Lovett said at his first news conference since assuming office that "a guided missile on the drawing board or at the proving ground can't win 'Heartbreak Ridge' in Korea tomorrow morning."

The new defense secretary added:

"There is enough truth in both the weapons development stories and in the progress reports on atmoic energy to encourage a very optimistic outlook for improved American armament.

'However, until new weapons and new military applications of atomic energy are available for field use, our national safety depends upon improved conventional weapons in ample quantity and sufficient trained and equipped ground, naval and air forces."

He continued:

"There is no new, inexpensive or magic way to win wars in the near future."

Allied planes and American pilot shot up two more Red jets in the third straight day of record jet battles.

In ground fighting, Allied troops held a newly-won peak on the east front, along the coastal flank of which Red forces were blown out of hilltop bunkers by shellfire from the Battleship New Jersey.

The "Big J" rained more than 95 tons of high-explosives on enemy positions Wednesday.

U. S. Fifth Airforce pilots reported sighting nearly 3,000 Red vehicles moving down North Korean roads toward the front during the night hours up to dawn Thursday.

Then waves of planes unleashed a daylong air assault aimed at what a spokesman described as "increasing enemy road and rail traffic along the main supply arteries," especially the routes from Pyongyang to the west-central sector.

The Fifth Airforce announced Thursday night at its planes in 676 daylight sorties cut Red rail lines at 51 places and destroyed or damaged 64 rail cars, one locomotive and two supply dumps.

The airmen were credited also with destruction of a rail tunnel and the killing or wounding of 120 Communist troops.

Dewey Calls Out Grand Jury To Probe Politicians

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared today that political corruption involving "both political parties" exists in Staten Island and ordered an extraordinary grand jury investigation.

At the same time Edward A. Ruppell, Staten Island Republican political boss who had been assailed by several witnsess before the New York State Crime Commission, submitted his resignation as Richmond borough works commissioner.

Ruppell, who had admitted soliciting "contributions" from office holders to pay "political expenses," submitted his resignation to Borough President Cornelius A. Hall who had appointed him to the $10,000 a year post several years ago.

Witnesses before the crime commission had testified that the Staten Island GOP boss had sold liquor licenses, intimidated witnesses and allied himself with gamblers.

Man Pays Fine For Damaging Farmer's Fence

Pickaway County has registered its first arrest and conviction under the new law governing real property damages.

Joseph Sheets, 26, of Mt. Sterling Route 3, was fined $10 and costs under the new regulation for failing to report damage to a farm fence on Route 56.

Deputy Jack Dewey said the man's auto struck a fence at the Clarence List farm and that the man failed to report the incident.

"Any person who damages or destroys any real property along the highway, under the new law, has 24 hours in which to notify either the owner or the sheriff of the county in which the mishap happened," Dewey said, explaining the new regulation. "If he doesn't make the report, he is liable for arrest."

Lad, 10, Drowns In Toledo Creek

TOLEDO, Sept. 27—Frederick McConnel, 10, of Toledo drowned late yesterday in 10 Mile Creek while two brothers tried futiley to save him.

Frederick and his two brothers were playing along the creek when he fell off a pipe which juts into the water. Police said the water was 14 feet deep at that point.

Joseph, 6, and a younger brother tried to throw a rope to Frederick but their efforts failed. Screams attracted Robert Arendt, 19, who dived into the water. His legs became cramped from the chilly water and he had to give up the attempt.

'Scioto Cleanup' Panel Selected By Rotary Club

Durward Dowden has been named head of a special Circleville Rotary Club committee which has been given the task of campaigning for a "cleanup of the Scioto."

The committee, composed of 10 men, held a preliminary meeting this week to map its campaign against the "big ditch" pouring southward from Columbus.

Named committee officers with Dowden were Orsan Patrick, vice-chairman; and Frank E. Barnhill Jr., secretary.

Other members of the committee are Robert L. Brehmer, Robert L. Brehmer Jr., George Foresman, Harry Hill, Henry Reid, Howard Smith and Boyd Stout.

The panel selected Earl Smith as its legal adviser.

Ervin Leist, Circleville water and sewer department manager, appeared before the group to give background information on recent state and federal legislation regarding stream pollution and to describe methods of sewage disposal.

The committee did not reveal its immediate program, but indicated that various Columbus and state officials would be contacted.

County Buys 28 Pct. Of Bond Drive Quota

Judge William D. Radcliff, Pickaway County Defense Bond chairman, said Thursday that the county has attained 28.9 per cent of its $59,000 quota in the Defense Bond Drive which began Labor Day and ends Oct. 27. The totals announced were compiled from Federal Reserve Bank reports for the period from Sept. 3 through Sept. 15.

Nine counties attained 50 per cent or more during the first two weeks, and Noble County has reached 110.1 per cent. According to Merrill L. Predmore, state director, the sales reflect the same increase in buying marked by August sales throughout the state when August 1950 sales totals were exceeded this August by 13 per cent.

When August figures were announced last week Predmore said that extensive support by industry, labor and various volunteer groups, plus an intensification of interest in America's international picture, "apparently is having a marked effect upon the Defense Bond program."

Ranking counties, and their percentages of quotas attained, were: Noble, 110.1; Wyandot, 92.8; Harrison, 82.5; Williams, 76.9; Fulton, 56.6; Highland, 55.1; Champaign, 54.8; Wayne, 54.6; Morrow, 50.2, and Adams, 48.4.

Michigan Cop Plane Stays Overnight Here

A Michigan state police plane landed at Thomas airport west of Circleville Wednesday, weathering in here because of a low ceiling.

The Michigan patrol plane, a Beechcraft Bonanza four-placer, was piloted by Barney Forberg in a flight from Louisville, Ky.

State Patrolman W. D. Braucher of Ohio was flying the Ohio patrol plane in escort of the Michigan ship when the ceiling flattened down here, although the Ohioan took his plane into Columbus before landing.

The Ohio patrolman then returned by auto to Circleville, picked up the visiting state patrolmen and returned them to Columbus, where they spent the night.

The Michigan plane took off from the local airfield at about 10:30 a. m. Thursday to complete its flight into Detroit.

"charges and rumors" made in Congress and elsewhere of illegal or improper conduct by public officials.

The President said:

"In recent months, there has been something amounting to a deliberate effort to discredit the government service.

"Attempts have been made through implication and innuendo, and by exaggeration and distortion of the facts in a few cases, to create the impression that graft and corruption are running rampant through the whole government.

"I am told that people all around the country are getting a mistaken and a distorted impression that the government is full of evil-doers, full of men and women with low standards of morality, full of people who are lining their own pockets and disregarding the public interest.

"This is a terrible distortion of the true facts about our government. It would be tragic if our citizens came to believe it.

"I believe the best thing we can do to spike this effort to discredit government officials is to place all the facts right on the record. The facts themselves are the best cure for public doubts and uncertainties."

Ohio Potatoes To Be In Short Supply, Is Fear

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27—Whether you like them fried, mashed, boiled or baked—you'll find Ohio grown potatoes exceptionally good eating this Fall.

Eugene Wittmeyer, extension horticulturist at Ohio State university, today said homemakers would find the quality of the 1951 crop, now being harvested, to be even better than in past years.

But there will not be enough Ohio grown potatoes to go around. Ohio growers produce less than half of the potatoes consumed in the state, and the estimated 31,000 acres grown this year is about 8,000 acres less than that grown in 1950.

Wittmeyer credited the dry Summer and the grower tendency to produce a more mature potato for market as being chiefly responsible for the high quality of the current crop. While the dry weather improved the quality, it did not affect the yield too much as most of the large commercial growers are equipped for irrigation.

Average per acre yield of potatoes this year is expected to be around 190 bushels, about 10 bushels less per acre than last year. Wittmeyer said he has had several reports of yields ranging from 400 to 500 bushels per acre in Northeastern Ohio. One central Ohio grower turned in an unofficial estimate of 600 bushels per acre on a field that had been irrigated six times during the season.

In addition, one person each was arrested for failing to yield the right of way, running a stop light and speeding.

Brannan Cites Importance Of Farm Machinery

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Agriculture Secretary Brannan boasts that the efficient mechanized farms of the United States need only one-eighth of the nation's manpower for agriculture.

The secretary said that this figure is far below that of other nations, particularly the Soviet Union, where a far larger percentage of the labor force is needed to produce food and fiber.

Brannan said this nation can be proud of the fact that farmers are geared up to the job of producing a good 50 per cent more per man-hour than they did before World War II.

He pointed out one-third more food and fiber is being produced this year than in 1940—with fewer people in agriculture and only about the same acreage in cultivation.

Speaking before the Alabama State Agricultural Mobilization Committee in Montgomery, the cabinet member said this year American farmers are using $17.5 billion worth of farm machinery and equipment—two and a half times as much as in 1940.

Two Autoists Pay Fines In Local Court

Two men were fined a total of $35 and costs Wednesday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller for traffic violations.

Donald Robinson of Bexley was fined $25 and costs for reckless operation. He was arrested on Route 62 Sunday by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

Wells said Robinson's auto sideswiped a tractor-trailer outfit. The Bexley man at the time said he was all right, Wells said, but discovered later he had suffered a fractured wrist bone.

Samuel Gibson, 32, of Medina, was fined $10 and costs for driving without an operator's license. He was arrested on West High street by Officer Bob Temple.

McCarthy Is Heard

can Activities Committee in 1944 and asked if McCarthy knew whether Jessup was a member then. McCarthy replied:

"I haven't been able to get a later letterhead."

Sen. Fulbright, (D) Ark., pointed out that Sen. Douglas (D) Ill., then a Chicago educator, was a director of the emergency conference.

McCarthy replied: "On each of these we will find some good people—but you won't find Professor Paul Douglas on all six."

Senators also challenged McCarthy's linking of Jessup with the "Coordinating Committee to Lift the Embargo" on arms to Spanish republicans merely because the organization quoted from a Jessup letter to the New York Times.

McCarthy defended the listing on grounds that Jessup, a professor of international law, had opposed the lifting of the embargo on shipments to Britain during the Hitler-Stalin pact, while advocating that it be raised on shipments to what McCarthy termed "the Communist areas of Spain."

Jessup was among faculty advisers to the American Law Students Association, which McCarthy said was cited by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee as having been affiliated with three other youth groups which it named as Communist fronts.

Chairman Sparkman, (D) Ala., pointed out that distinguished professors from seven law schools were listed. McCarthy replied:

"I call your attention to the last name, Abe Fortas of Yale. You will recall that he was Owen Lattimore's lawyer."

Fulbright asked: "Is he a Communist?"

McCarthy snapped back: "Oh, I don't know whether he pays dues."

Lausche Lauds Kentucky Judge's Gambling Battle

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27 — Gov. Lausche has complimented Kentucky Circuit Judge Joseph Goodenough of Newport for his action in ordering a special grand jury to return conspiracy indictments in the fight to clean up gambling across the Ohio river from Cincinnati.

The governor said that cooperation between the officials of Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio "can go a long way in breaking the back of the lawless operations of these gangsters." He added:

"I am sure the action taken by Judge Goodenough, if vigorously followed, will enure to the good of the citizens of Kentucky, as well as Ohio.

"The gambling syndicate, a number of whom are from Cleveland, have operated in towns along the Ohio river in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio. Their operations were brought to an end in Ohio, but they aim to continue outside of our state.

"It is my understanding they are hoping again to resume their operations in Ohio. We contemplate keeping after them with the view of terminating their reign of lawlessness and exploitation of gullible citizens through their lucrative operations."

which published charges that he had received $8,000 from the company.

* * *

BOYLE ADMITTED receiving a $150 camera from Cecil Green, head of Lithofold's Washington office. He said Green gave the camera "to my two daughters" one Christmas.

McCellan questioned Boyle about the Feb. 28, 1949, telephone call he made to Harley Hise, then RFC chairman, to set up an appointment for a Lithofold official.

McClellan declared, "personally I can see no wrong in it if it was only to make an appointment at their ('Lithofold officials') request, but if you manifested or implied you had an interest and wanted them to get special attention, then I think your conduct would be wrong."

Boyle replied, "I agree absolutely, 100 percent."

Boyle said that when he became a paid vice-chairman of the Democratic committee, he told his law clients he would no longer represent them.

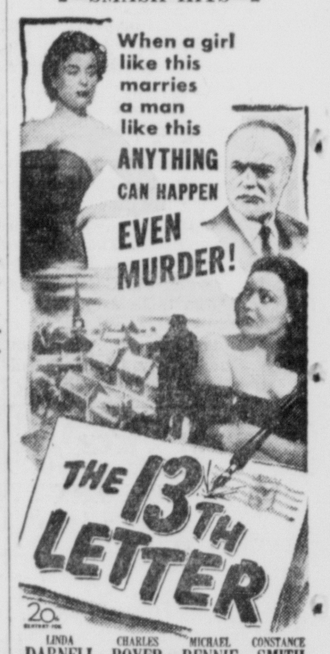

In connection with the charges of the St. Louis paper, Boyle said there is the "possibility of some legal matter."

McClellan declared that while he approves freedom of the press, "I do not aprpove freedom of that character." He referred to the paper's charges against Boyle.

GE Gadget To Aid In Cancer War

Scientists Laud Newest Method

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Scientists today inspected an atomic-age device which is expected to offer a new and cheaper method of treating cancer.

The apparatus, developed by the General Electric Co., and designated the Cobalt-60 cancer tele-therapy unit, was exhibited at the American Roentgen Ray Society's annual Washington meeting.

GE officials explained that the unit uses a radioactive isotope of cobalt as its source of energy.

Demonstrating the international cooperation existing in peacetime applications of atomic energy, the Cobalt-60 isotope is produced at the Chalk River atomic pile in Canada, when ordinary Cobalt-59 is bombarded with neutrons.

In laymen's language, this is the way the treatment is effected:

FOUR SMALL wafers of the radioactive cobalt are 'juggled" in the GE machine so that atomic materials are beamed directly at deep-seated cancers.

GE experts said that this method eliminates the painful and dangerous task of planting radioactive materials deep inside a patient's body through surgery.

The spokesmen said that another great advantage of the new machine is its low cost. The cobalt process costs about $18,000, compared to $26 million worth of radium which would be required to achieve similar results.

The cobalt unit is designed to do substantially the same work as two million volt x-ray machines.

GE developed the Cobalt-60 anti-cancer weapon with the aid of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies after the late, British-born Physicist Leonard G. Grimett contributed the original designs.

The machine soon is to be subjected to a series of tests at Oak Ridge and at the M. D. Anderson hospital at Texas university, where Grimett did much of his work.

Scientists familiar with the unit pointed out that when the Cobalt-60 from Canada is placed in the machine at Oak Ridge, the transfer must take place under nine feet of water to absorb the dangerous radiation.

Another GE exhibit at the meeting is an x-ray machine which can be used at the front lines in combat. The device can be torn down and reassembled by relatively inexperienced men, allowing great mobility.

Meat Slaughter Totals Running Below '50 Total

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—While everyone from livestock men to legislators continue the debate on government slaughter quotas, agriculture officials report slaughter and production figures are still below 1950 for most items.

Officials said total meat production under federal inspection for the week ended Saturday was 307 million pounds—four per cent below the previous week and down five per cent from a week earlier.

They reported cattle slaughter of 247 thousand head was two per cent lower than the previous week—and 15 per cent below the same period of 1950.

Meanwhile, hog slaughter and pork production dropped slightly from the preceding week, but remained seven and eight per cent higher than the same week a year ago.

The British (and Canadian) gallon is equal of 1.2 U.S. gallons.

DeGasperi Starting Home, Sure Italy To Be Given Another Chance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Italian Prime Minister Alcide deGasperi headed home today to start the machinery that will give his country full stature in the Atlantic community of nations.

"Greatly satisfied" with agreements he reached with President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson, the prime minister held morning train reservations to New York. He is to fly to Rome Saturday.

De Gasperi took with him:

1. A joint pledge that the U. S. Britain and France will back a revision of the Italian peace treaty enabling Italy to rearm at will and produce military equipment freely.

2. Assurance of President Truman that "if the Soviet Union keeps on vetoing Italy's membership in the United Nations, other methods must be found to enable Italy to play a full and equal part in upholding the principles of the United Nations."

3. A PROMISE of continuing U. S. military and economic aid within the limits of congressional appropriations.

4. A promise that the U. S. will give "particular attention" to the placement of offshore military orders with Italian plants to relieve that country's unemployment problem.

5. Assurance that the U. S. will cooperate in the functioning of any international organization that can effectively help Italy move some of its swollen population to other free world countries.

The Italian statesman said he would ask for treaty revisions which would:

1. Recognize Italy's present political position and grant the Rome government full equality in international relations.

2. Place back in Italian hands all decisions concerning the extent of that country's military strength and production of defense materials.

The grave illness of Britain's King George VI after a lung operation, has had a totally unexpected result—the unification of the sharply-divided British Labor Party.

A sudden realization of the impermanence of things brought about by the major surgery performed on Sunday galvanized the Socialists to action in their own behalf.

The rift between leftwing elements headed by Former Labor Minister Aneurin Bevan and Prime Minister Clement Richard Attlee apparently was healed overnight.

And the slogan of the reunion was to defeat the Conservative Party headed by Winston Churchill in the elections scheduled for Oct. 25.

Therein lies one of the strange paradoxes of modern Britain.

Traditionally, the Conservative Party is the "party of the king." But it takes even less than a royal illness to prove the essential solidarity of the people behind their sovereigns and, except for a rebellious fanatical few, the Laborites themselves are the strongest proponents of constitutional monarchy.

RECENT STRAW votes and polls of one sort or another have given the Conservatives a six-to-four chance of victory in the October balloting.

But these estimates have been predicated in large measure upon Bevan's revolt and the likelihood that his own unquestioned aspirations to head the Labor Party would result in a disastrous split.

If the breach now actually has been healed—if, in other words, the recent announcements do not represent merely a surge of emotion for national unity in view of the king's illness—the picture has changed appreciably.

Bevan, who inaugurated the British national health program, resigned as minister of labor in April when Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Gaitskell introduced a budget that cut deeply into government appropriations for medical expenses.

Now Gaitskell has returned to London from conferences in Washington and Ottawa with the announcement that within a short time, 82 out of every 1,000 Britons will be working on defense projects. He said that this compared with 74 out of every 1,000 in the United States.

The conclusion to be drawn is that the rearmament program mapped out as a result of real and potential Soviet aggression is meeting with popular approval.

AND BY THE SAME token, it can be assumed that the policies of the Labor government, despite the heavy drain they have placed upon the incomes of all Britons, have been given electoral sanction. If this is the case, Attlee should have clear sailing when the country goes to the polls next month.

At one time, there seemed to be a distinct possibility that Attlee, exercising a constitutional right, might choose to postpone the elections in view of the king's illness.

But he decided against this measure, and his reasons probably were threefold:

1. British national peace of mind, already upset by the king's ailment, might be further jeopardized.

2. He now has the assurance of Bevan's support—a not inconsiderable item. The fiery leftwing Welshman has a very appreciable following.

3. The country as a whole is being knit into unity, and the old political theory of "not changing horses" seems certain for resurrection in October.

Of tremendous importance is the fact that in recent weeks and months, the Socialist regime has begun to soft-pedal some of its concepts of extreme nationalization.

Bevan was Attlee's firmest supporter in the early days of state control. If he has now decided to go along with the government, this may be token some new degree of moderation all the way down the line. At least the national grief over King George has proved that the essentials of British life change but slowly, if at all.

164,000 Auto Workers Idle

DETROIT, Sept. 27 — Annual inventory shutdowns, material shortages and government production quotas today brought idleness to over 164,000 auto workers.

Today and tomorrow, 25,700 hourly-rated workers at the Ford Rouge plant will stay home. Another 15,000 in Ford assembly plants and 1,500 in the company's paper and glass works will be idled tomorrow only. The largest number of workers affected are 75,000 Chrysler Corp. workers.

Presbyterian Men's Group Is Reactivated

A total of 43 members of Men's Brotherhood of Circleville Presbyterian church and three guests met Wednesday in the church to reactivate the organization.

Speaker for the evening was F. E. Laderer of Columbus, president of the Council of Presbyterian Men.

Other guests during the evening were Edward Sensenbrenner of Circleville and M. E. Sensenbrenner of Hoge Memorial church, Columbus.

A committee of five men was appointed during the meeting to nominate a slate of officers. Members of the nomination committee are Wes Edstrom, Melvin Yates, Theodore Steele, Thomas Houghton and Lloyd Weiss.

New officers for the reactivated Presbyterian men's group will be elected during the next session of the group, slated for Oct. 24.

City Transit Picture Brighter

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27—The outlook brightens today in the threatened transportation tieup in Columbus next week.

City council agreed to boost the ordinance fare to 10 cents cash and invited transportation officials to a meeting today to consider it.

Council also ordered the city attorney to go after an injunction preventing the company from stopping service Oct. 1.

On the other side, union officials announced a break in stalemated contract negotiations and indicated an agreement might be reached before the Oct. 1 expiration date.

NOBODY KNOWS

THROUGHOUT the country the debate over the future price pattern is raging. Government heads get most publicity with their claim that prices are pointing upward by 10 per cent because Congress didn't take certain action the administration recommended.

If that prediction comes true, the politicians can blame the opposition in next year's campaign. If not, the public is expected to forget about the prediction.

But some of the boys are talking back to the prophets. They say the only embarrassment the price ceiling fixers are under is that they no sooner fix a ceiling than increasing production or declining demand lowers the government-fixed price.

A report of the National Association of Purchasing Agents says:

"Production has been dropping for three months, but this dip does not yet match the drop-off of new orders. . .Buying policy is being reduced to the shortest possible procurement range."

The question is whether rearmament will restrict consumer goods production to the point that prices will surge upward, or the public will pursue a conservative buying course and prices will be stabilized.

Those who are guessing now have no alternative but to await events for the answer.

IRAN OIL TO RUSSIA

FACING a critical financial situation because of the loss of revenue from petroleum, the government of Iran has announced negotiations with Soviet Russia are getting under way, expected to result in some sort of barter agreement by which Russia will get the oil which formerly went to Great Britain.

The announcement may have little basis in fact and may be designed to stampede the London government into accepting Iran's terms.

If it enters into an agreement with Russia, Iran will quickly learn it is a one-way affair. Russia never dealt honorably with any nation. If the reds get their hands on Iranian petroleum, the revenue so badly needed will not follow. Russia will simply move in and take over, and Premier Mossadegh, now so cocky with Great Britain, will go into the discard.

Russia has become a sort of stalking horse for many of the smaller European nations. They threaten to go over to the communists unless the anti-communist bloc deals on their terms.

It is vital for European security to keep Iranian oil out of Russian hands. Iran is playing this note for all it is worth.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

President Truman is correct beyond criticism in his decision to keep Dean Acheson. He would even be justified in naming Acheson as his successor if he could, because Acheson has made the foreign and domestic policies of the current administration. As our foreign commitments dominate the budget and as the budget controls all domestic affairs, our government has gradually but definitely moved, as to policy, from the White House to the State Department. It will be sound to base the 1952 campaign on a debate of the Acheson policies and achievements.

Acheson is, in effect, the pivot of the administration. Were President Truman to let Acheson go, it would be an admission of the failure of his administration. The President could not do that. The suggestion that Mr. Truman will have Acheson with him on the train when he speaks to the country, is an evidence of political realism.

There is no reason, however, why either Truman or Acheson should go credit jumping for the Japanese treaty. That treaty is the result of the labors of Gen. Douglas MacArthur over a prolonged period in the war. This work was implemented by the efforts of John Foster Dulles. That that was understood at the San Francisco conference was made clear at the mere mention of MacArthur's name. It brought the strongest applause of the evening. Whatever comes of the Japanese treaty, the credit or blame must be MacArthur's.

The credit jumper is not an extraordinary phenomenon in industry or in government. One man does a tremendous job and at the crucial moment, another, usually his superior, jumps in and grabs the credit. If the young fellow complains, he often finds himself suffering from lessened opportunity or he might even be fired.

When Mr. Truman does the credit jumping for Acheson with regard to the Japanese treaty, he hurts his favorite because those who know the facts will wonder why anyone would want to deprive MacArthur of the fruits of his achievements.

However, the President does not limit himself to credit jumping MacArthur; he tries to do the same as regards Herbert Hoover, attempting to give the impression that the work of the Hoover Commission was a joint operation of Hoover and Acheson.

This is not true and President Truman knows it, because the differences between Hoover and Acheson were brought to the President for decision. There is, however, a record to which we can refer which clearly shows where Acheson stood with regard to the Hoover Commission's reports. Acheson concurred with eight reports; he dissented, in whole or in part, from 11 reports. This is Acheson's record:

"Report No. 1. General management of the executive branch; concurred.

"Report No. 2. Personnel management; concurred.

"Report No. 3. Office of General Services (supply activities); concurred.

"Report No. 4. The Postoffice Department; concurred.

"Report No. 5. Foreign affairs; concurred.

Disorders Of The Nails Often Due To A Person's Occupation

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WE think of the nails as perhaps the toughest and most resistant parts of the body; nevertheless, they are subject to many disorders.

It is quite possible to be born without nails and even without the ability to grow nails. This, fortunately, is a rather rare happening, but many a child is born with incomplete or undersized nails.

Changes of Age

Old age often brings distinct changes in the nails which, at this time of life, are frequently found to be thickened and hardened. In some cases, the nails of the large toes are those particularly affected, becoming dark and curling into the form of a horn. Such nails may be either extremely fragile or very hard.

Hangnail is the result of poor nail care, usually occurring after injury during manicure or nail-tearing. Occupational injury to the nails; diseases, such as diabetes, tuberculosis, or chronic infections; or the wearing of ill-fitting or tight shoes, accompanied with local infection—all play a part in the formation of what is known as a felon or infection of the skin around the nail.

Fungus Infections

Fungus and yeast infections are the cause of many ailments of the nails. These types of infection are difficult to diagnose, and many times a sample of the infected area must be examined under the microscope before a diagnosis can be made. Usually, nails infected by a fungus, show small or large areas of destruction, are extremely fragile, discolored, scaling, and somewhat enlarged.

There is a possibility of nail disease developing due to toxic materials used in various occupations.

Certain vitamin deficiencies may also cause nail disorders. When this is the case, it takes a number of months to correct the condition of the nails.

Environmental Disorder

A disorder in which the nails soften and dissolve has defied treatment of all types. Usually, however, if the person makes a complete change of environment, a cure can be affected. Recently, a study was made of workers with vegetable and fruit juices who complained of this condition. It was found that, upon removal from their occupation, the nails returned to normal.

Certain disorders of the endocrine glands, such as a lack of thyroid, or sex gland hormones, may be responsible for producing a disorder of the nails. This may be readily remedied by the administration of the deficient substance.

It is important, in all cases of nail disorder, that a complete physical examination be made by the physician so that any underlying general or local cause may be found and corrected.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

ELLEN changed her dress three times before she was pleased with her appearance on Sunday. The beige was new and fitted her best, but in the slanting sunlight of the fall day it made her all one color, hair, eyes and skin. She tried a blue frock but it was fluffy, and she did not want to look fluffy today. Ultimately she settled on a tile red with big gamin pockets and buttons, a dress her mother disliked.

"It's really not your type of frock at all," Martha grumbled when Ellen showed herself briefly in the sickroom.

Ellen went downstairs to wait. Her hands were cold, her body felt clammy. She was reacting as absurdly as any high-school sophomore, she told herself in some disgust; that was because so little had happened to her. If only Tony would not show up in a turtle-neck sweater and dirty saddle shoes! He had worn white slacks and a silk shirt at the dance in Florida, but a coatless man was accepted in the heat of Florida summers, while this town was still rigidly conservative, especially on Sundays.

She did not recognize him when he stopped in the street, studying the house numbers. He was bareheaded but very smartly arrayed in a neat brown suit and well-polished shoes. His dark face still had the same look of cool self-complacency and he carried himself with the same jaunty assurance, not quite insolent but more arrogant than debonair.

Ellen's breath quickened and she had to steady her hands before she moved to open the front door. Tony stood on the doorstep looking up at the slightly pompous facade of the old house.

"This house," he said abruptly, "looks like old New York. Hello, Ellen."

"Hello, Tony. Will you come in? Do you know New York?"

"Born there." He followed her into the high, dim hall. "Beautiful!" he murmured. "And they tear down houses like this and stick up modernistic horrors, with glass-brick walls and hencoop roofs! England has it all over us—they keep their fine old houses and are proud of them."

"Were you in England in the war? Do come in and sit down, Tony."

He moved slowly, studying the paneled staircase, the pillared arches of carved walnut opening a vista into the big parlor and dining room at the rear of the house. She saw him move his hand over the polished surface of a console table.

"England?" He came out of his absorption abruptly. "Yes, I was there. London was taking a beating then but there was a lot standing that you could see. Then they moved us to a little town where all the houses looked like pictures on calendars and the whole country was primped up like a park. How old is this house?"

"I'm not sure. My grandfather bought it before my mother was born. My mother could tell you when it was built, but she's an invalid and not well enough to see anyone."

"Too bad," said Tony briefly. He wandered about the parlor, grinned at a black onyx figure of an Oriental girl on a marble pedestal.

"What do you do with yourself on Sundays?" he asked.

"My father plays golf usually, and sometimes I read to my mother. He's with her this afternoon, so I'm free. What would you like to do, Tony?"

His eyes twinkled. "I came to see you. You say."

Ellen swallowed uncertainly. Grisly to be so inhibited, so ignorant, so circumscribed!

She said, a little desperately, "Let's walk. Then we can decide."

"I," said Tony getting up, "am one of those droops who don't own a car. I did try to borrow one, but on Sunday, no soap."

"Everything in town worth seeing is quite near," she said. "If you'll wait I'll get a hat."

"You don't need a hat," he protested. "Your hair's pretty; you ought not to hide it."

"Well, I'll speak to the family and tell them we're going out."

Her father's slow voice stopped as she halted at her mother's door.

"We're going out, Papa. Mamma, Tony thinks this house is beautiful. He says it reminds him of England," she said eagerly.

"Of course it's a handsome house," Martha said. "The man who built it was English. Where are you going, Ellen?"

"I don't know. Just walking around."

"Wear your big hat and gloves. The sun is still very direct."

"Yes, Mamma. You're sure you wouldn't like to meet Tony?"

"Your father will come down later. Don't be out late."

"No, I won't." She brought a hat and gloves from her room, went down, parking the hat and gloves quietly in the big teakwood chest on the landing. "I'm ready." She hurried lightly into the parlor, hoping that a little of the stimulation that was making her finger tips tingle was showing in her eyes. But Tony's back was turned; he was studying the knickknacks in a French cabinet in the corner.

"Somebody fought a war," he remarked.

"My father. In France and later with the army of occupation."

"Same old phony-looking French money. Marks too. We didn't get any of those. The Russians kept us out of Berlin. Better watch my step around your old man. I don't know though . . . that cork — cognac! We could be brothers under the skin."

"My father will be down later. He wants to meet you."

"Judge, is he?"

"Traffic court—a special assignment," she said. "Maybe you read about him?" She mentioned the article in the national magazine.

Tony looked impressed. "Maybe he won't want to meet me. The way they wrote him up he sounded plenty tough."

"He isn't. Just thorough. No one gets a ticket fixed here any more, and he has sent some people to jail—even friends. But the traffic death rate is down 30 per cent," Ellen said loyally.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Tallulah Bankhead

NEW YORK—I was somewhere between eight and 10 when my oldest brother took me in hand one wonderful Sunday afternoon and, after a safari by trolley, train and bus, fetched me to the Polo Grounds to see the Giants play for the first time.

The way has been long and thorny since that time but I have been faithful to them, even in these troubled times when the team is led by Leo Durocher, the virtually peerless leader who represents just about everything that the usually genteel Giant fan abhors.

I sat by the rightfield foul line for years and watched Bill Terry elevate first-basemanship to a high art, and then I switched to the upper stands by third base, where you will see me now and then, to this day.

I gloated quietly when Terry's 1933 team—a sixth-place ball club fired by an inept but inspiring ballplayer named Blondy Ryan—won the World Series from the Senators in four out of five, and I suffered dismally when Ott's home run-hitting teams of the Forties kept finishing in the second division.

This long apprenticeship, I figured, qualified me as a front-line, or venerable old Giant fan, and for some seasons now I have been throwing my weight around authoritatively. I can remember when Rogers Hornsby played second one year for the Giants, and that memory alone makes me eligible for the elite guard. I had even hoped that one day I would be regarded as the No. 1 Giant fan. This is a country where any boy can become President.

* * * *

NOW I DISCOVER THAT SENIORITY means nothing. Nor sex. A woman has taken over as the outstanding Giant fan in New York—a volatile, chain-smoking, windblown actress of sorts who calls herself Tallulah Bankhead and spends her days and nights living up to the name.

I first met Miss Bankhead some years ago and after we shook hands, she promptly ordered me into her bedroom to help her move the bed around. After that I figured nothing she did could surprise me and so it has been to date.

I have just been reading a piece in the Woman's Home Companion by the amiable John Lardner, in which he dissects an evening he spent in the Polo Grounds with Miss Bankhead, and while I have been entertained, I have not been astonished.

Tallulah, it seems, is one of the two Great Ladies (as we say) of the theater who are noted as baseball fans, the other being Ethel Barrymore. "Ethel knows more than I do but I know something," Tallulah is reported to have said, with startling modesty. "Ethel is calm but I scream like a fishwife."

Not only that—in the pictorial layout with Lardner's piece, Miss B. occasionally looks like a fishwife, as well. There was a time when Tallu was very particular about what photos of her saw the light of day, but that time evidently is past.

Tallulah became a Giant fan 12 years ago, when she was playing in The Little Foxes, an enormously polished and dull play. A fellow actor used to pray to mysterious gods that the Giants win and Tallulah began to pray with him—louder and more violently, of course.

Soon she was caught up with the fever, and apparently she never has recovered. When she was doing Private Lives several seasons ago, actors coming onstage would mumble the Giant score into her ear and she would growl back "What inning?"

Mr. Lardner reports faithfully that since Miss Bankhead has become a Giant fan, the team never has won a pennant. She has stuck by them loyally, however, thus qualifying on that score—Giant fans get uneasy and nauseous every now and then but they never give up—and even during the war, she says, "I wept for them a little, darling, but there was too much else to weep about. Very first things must come first."

* * * *

SINCE DUROCHER BECAME MANAGER, Tallulah no longer has the box she used to occupy, it being filled daily by the presence of an actress named Laraine Day who is wed to the little manager. This has annoyed Tallu but on dark and troubled days she sympathizes with Laraine's suffering. "It really is tough on her and Leo," Tallulah says sympathetically. "It's a sad, horrible world. Why can't they win?"

One important item Tallulah has acquired easily and naturally. She hates the Dodgers. Speaking of the long walk that knocked-out-of-the-box pitchers have to make to the clubhouse in the Polo Grounds, she says "In Brooklyn, when they play the Dodgers, those barbarians, they simply sneak down under the grandstand when they're knocked out of the box."

NOBODY KNOWS

THROUGHOUT the country the debate over the future price pattern is raging. Government heads get most publicity with their claim that prices are pointing upward by 10 per cent because Congress didn't take certain action the administration recommended.

If that prediction comes true, the politicians can blame the opposition in next year's campaign. If not, the public is expected to forget about the prediction.

But some of the boys are talking back to the prophets. They say the only embarrassment the price ceiling fixers are under is that they no sooner fix a ceiling than increasing production or declining demand lowers the government-fixed price.

A report of the National Association of Purchasing Agents says:

"Production has been dropping for three months, but this dip does not yet match the drop-off of new orders. . .Buying policy is being reduced to the shortest possible procurement range."

The question is whether rearmament will restrict consumer goods production to the point that prices will surge upward, or the public will pursue a conservative buying course and prices will be stabilized.

Those who are guessing now have no alternative but to await events for the answer.

IRAN OIL TO RUSSIA

FACING a critical financial situation because of the loss of revenue from petroleum, the government of Iran has announced negotiations with Soviet Russia are getting under way, expected to result in some sort of barter agreement by which Russia will get the oil which formerly went to Great Britain.

The announcement may have little basis in fact and may be designed to stampede the London government into accepting Iran's terms.

If it enters into an agreement with Russia, Iran will quickly learn it is a one-way affair. Russia never dealt honorably with any nation. If the reds get their hands on Iranian petroleum, the revenue so badly needed will not follow. Russia will simply move in and take over, and Premier Mossadegh, now so cocky with Great Britain, will go into the discard.

Russia has become a sort of stalking horse for many of the smaller European nations. They threaten to go over to the communists unless the anti-communist bloc deals on their terms.

It is vital for European security to keep Iranian oil out of Russian hands. Iran is playing this note for all it is worth.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

President Truman is correct beyond criticism in his decision to keep Dean Acheson. He would even be justified in naming Acheson as his successor if he could, because Acheson has made the foreign and domestic policies of the current administration. As our foreign commitments dominate the budget and as the budget controls all domestic affairs, our government has gradually but definitely moved, as to policy, from the White House to the State Department. It will be sound to base the 1952 campaign on a debate of the Acheson policies and achievements.

Acheson is, in effect, the pivot of the administration. Were President Truman to let Acheson go, it would be an admission of the failure of his administration. The President could not do that. The suggestion that Mr. Truman will have Acheson with him on the train when he speaks to the country, is an evidence of political realism.

There is no reason, however, why either Truman or Acheson should go credit jumping for the Japanese treaty. That treaty is the result of the labors of Gen. Douglas MacArthur over a prolonged period in the war. This work was implemented by the efforts of John Foster Dulles. That that was understood at the San Francisco conference was made clear at the mere mention of MacArthur's name. It brought the strongest applause of the evening. Whatever comes of the Japanese treaty, the credit or blame must be MacArthur's.

The credit jumper is not an extraordinary phenomenon in industry or in government. One man does a tremendous job and at the crucial moment, another, usually his superior, jumps in and grabs the credit. If the young fellow complains, he often finds himself suffering from lessened opportunity or he might even be fired.

When Mr. Truman does the credit jumping for Acheson with regard to the Japanese treaty, he hurts his favorite because those who know the facts will wonder why anyone would want to deprive MacArthur of the fruits of his achievements.

However, the President does not limit himself to credit jumping MacArthur; he tries to do the same as regards Herbert Hoover, attempting to give the impression that the work of the Hoover Commission was a joint operation of Hoover and Acheson.

This is not true and President Truman knows it, because the differences between Hoover and Acheson were brought to the President for decision. There is, however, a record to which we can refer which clearly shows where Acheson stood with regard to the Hoover Commission's reports. Acheson concurred with eight reports; he dissented, in whole or in part, from 11 reports. This is Acheson's record:

"Report No. 1. General management of the executive branch; concurred.

"Report No. 2. Personnel management; concurred.

"Report No. 3. Office of General Services (supply activities); concurred.

"Report No. 4. The Postoffice Department; concurred.

"Report No. 5. Foreign affairs; concurred.

She was reacting as absurdly as any high-school sophomore, she told herself in some disgust; that was because so little had happened to her. If only Tony would not show up in a turtle-neck sweater and dirty saddle shoes! He had worn white slacks and a silk shirt at the dance in Florida, but a coatless man was accepted in the heat of Florida summers, while this town was still rigidly conservative, especially on Sundays.

She did not recognize him when he stopped in the street, studying the house numbers. He was bareheaded but very smartly arrayed in a neat brown suit and well-polished shoes. His dark face still had the same look of cool self-complacency and he carried himself with the same jaunty assurance, not quite insolent but more arrogant than debonair.

Ellen's breath quickened and she had to steady her hands before she moved to open the front door. Tony stood on the doorstep looking up at the slightly pompous facade of the old house.

"This house," he said abruptly, "looks like old New York. Hello, Ellen."

"Hello, Tony. Will you come in? Do you know New York?"

"Born there." He followed her into the high, dim hall. "Beautiful!" he murmured. "And they tear down houses like this and stick up modernistic horrors, with glass-brick walls and hencoop roofs! England has it all over us—they keep their fine old houses and are proud of them."

"Were you in England in the war? Do come in and sit down, Tony."

He moved slowly, studying the paneled staircase, the pillared arches of carved walnut opening a vista into the big parlor and dining room at the rear of the house. She saw him move his hand over the polished surface of a console table.

"England?" He came out of his absorption abruptly. "Yes, I was there. London was taking a beating then but there was a lot standing that you could see. Then they moved us to a little town where all the houses looked like pictures on calendars and the whole country was primped up like a park. How old is this house?"

"I'm not sure. My grandfather bought it before my mother was born. My mother could tell you when it was built, but she's an invalid and not well enough to see anyone."

"Too bad," said Tony briefly. He wandered about the parlor, grinned at a black onyx figure of an Oriental girl on a marble pedestal.

"What do you do with yourself on Sundays?" he asked.

"My father plays golf usually, and sometimes I read to my mother. He's with her this afternoon, so I'm free. What would you like to do, Tony?"

His eyes twinkled. "I came to see you. You say."

Ellen swallowed uncertainly. Grisly to be so inhibited, so ignorant, so circumscribed!

She said, a little desperately, "Let's walk. Then we can decide."

"I," said Tony getting up, "am one of those droops who don't own a car. I did try to borrow one, but on Sunday, no soap."

"Everything in town worth seeing is quite near," she said. "If you'll wait I'll get a hat."

"You don't need a hat," he protested. "Your hair's pretty; you ought not to hide it."

"Well, I'll speak to the family and tell them we're going out."

Her father's slow voice stopped as she halted at her mother's door.

"We're going out, Papa. Mamma, Tony thinks this house is beautiful. He says it reminds him of England," she said eagerly.

"Of course it's a handsome house," Martha said. "The man who built it was English. Where are you going, Ellen?"

"I don't know. Just walking around."

"Wear your big hat and gloves. The sun is still very direct."

"Yes, Mamma. You're sure you wouldn't like to meet Tony?"

"Your father will come down later. Don't be out late."

"No, I won't." She brought a hat and gloves from her room, went down, parking the hat and gloves quietly in the big teakwood chest on the landing. "I'm ready." She hurried lightly into the parlor, hoping that a little of the stimulation that was making her finger tips tingle was showing in her eyes. But Tony's back was turned; he was studying the knickknacks in a French cabinet in the corner.

"Somebody fought a war," he remarked.

"My father. In France and later with the army of occupation."

"Same old phony-looking French money. Marks too. We didn't get any of those. The Russians kept us out of Berlin. Better watch my step around your old man. I don't know though . . . that cork—cognac! We could be brothers under the skin."

"My father will be down later. He wants to meet you."

"Judge, is he?"

"Traffic court—a special assignment," she said. "Maybe you read about him?" She mentioned the article in the national magazine.

Tony looked impressed. "Maybe he won't want to meet me. The way they wrote him up he sounded plenty tough."

"He isn't. Just thorough. No one gets a ticket fixed here any more, and he has sent some people to jail—even friends. But the traffic death rate is down 30 per cent," Ellen said loyally.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Tallulah Bankhead

NEW YORK—I was somewhere between eight and 10 when my oldest brother took me in hand one wonderful Sunday afternoon and, after a safari by trolley, train and bus, fetched me to the Polo Grounds to see the Giants play for the first time.

The way has been long and thorny since that time but I have been faithful to them, even in these troubled times when the team is led by Leo Durocher, the virtually peerless leader who represents just about everything that the usually genteel Giant fan abhors.

I sat by the rightfield foul line for years and watched Bill Terry elevate first-basemanship to a high art, and then I switched to the upper stands by third base, where you will see me now and then, to this day.

I gloated quietly when Terry's 1933 team—a sixth-place ball club fired by an inept but inspiring ballplayer named Blondy Ryan—won the World Series from the Senators in four out of five, and I suffered dismally when Ott's home run-hitting teams of the Forties kept finishing in the second division.

This long apprenticeship, I figured, qualified me as a front-line, or venerable old Giant fan, and for some seasons now I have been throwing my weight around authoritatively. I can remember when Rogers Hornsby played second one year for the Giants, and that memory alone makes me eligible for the elite guard. I had even hoped that one day I would be regarded as the No. 1 Giant fan. This is a country where any boy can become President.

* * * *

NOW I DISCOVER THAT SENIORITY means nothing. Nor sex. A woman has taken over as the outstanding Giant fan in New York—a volatile, chain-smoking, windblown actress of sorts who calls herself Tallulah Bankhead and spends her days and nights living up to the name.

I first met Miss Bankhead some years ago and after we shook hands, she promptly ordered me into her bedroom to help her move the bed around. After that I figured nothing she did could surprise me and so it has been to date.

I have just been reading a piece in the Woman's Home Companion by the amiable John Lardner, in which he dissects an evening he spent in the Polo Grounds with Miss Bankhead, and while I have been entertained, I have not been astonished.

Tallulah, it seems, is one of the two Great Ladies (as we say) of the theater who are noted as baseball fans, the other being Ethel Barrymore. "Ethel knows more than I do but I know something," Tallulah is reported to have said, with startling modesty. "Ethel is calm but I scream like a fishwife."

Not only that—in the pictorial layout with Lardner's piece, Miss B. occasionally looks like a fishwife, as well. There was a time when Tallu was very particular about what photos of her saw the light of day, but that time evidently is past.

Tallulah became a Giant fan 12 years ago, when she was playing in The Little Foxes, an enormously polished and dull play. A fellow actor used to pray to mysterious gods that the Giants win and Tallulah began to pray with him—louder and more violently, of course.

Soon she was caught up with the fever, and apparently she never has recovered. When she was doing Private Lives several seasons ago, actors coming onstage would mumble the Giant score into her ear and she would growl back "What inning?"

Mr. Lardner reports faithfully that since Miss Bankhead has become a Giant fan, the team never has won a pennant. She has stuck by them loyally, however, thus qualifying on that score—Giant fans get uneasy and nauseous every now and then but they never give up—and even during the war, she says, "I wept for them a little, darling, but there was too much else to weep about. Very first things must come first."

* * * *

SINCE DUROCHER BECAME MANAGER, Tallulah no longer has the box she used to occupy, it being filled daily by the presence of an actress named Laraine Day who is wed to the little manager. This has annoyed Tallu but on dark and troubled days she sympathizes with Laraine's suffering. "It really is tough on her and Leo," Tallulah says sympathetically. "It's a sad, horrible world. Why can't they win?"

One important item Tallulah has acquired easily and naturally. She hates the Dodgers. Speaking of the long walk that knocked-out-of-the-box pitchers have to make to the clubhouse in the Polo Grounds, she says "In Brooklyn, when they play the Dodgers, those barbarians, they simply sneak down under the grandstand when they're knocked out of the box."

School Narcotics Traffic Said Moving To Ohio

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27 — State Health Director John D. Porterfield warned today that the school narcotics traffic is moving into Ohio where treatment facilities are "grossly inadequate."

The director told the 3rd annual conference of local Ohio health commissioners that "prevention here is the only hopeful answer."

Dr. Porterfield informed the Columbus gathering that he had "authenticated facts" of a step-up in drug traffic in Ohio.

Describing the extent of the narcotics racket in New York City schools, the director went on to add:

"Ohio is apparently not so far advanced, but there are signs that the sales force has extended itself to this territory."

He said treatment and cure of drug addiction is a lengthy and difficult process and the prognosis "is not too good" due to grossly inadequate hospitals and personnel.

Dr. Porterfield said prevention must consist of an alert law enforcement program. He added that "measures are being taken presently to strengthen such programs."

PUCO Planning Order Banning Racing Wires

COLUMBUS, Sept. 27 — The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio today expects to issue an order soon in the controversial ban on gambling wire services in this state.

The final hearing in the case was held yesterday with everyone agreeing that known betting places should not have telephone or telegraph service.

The chief difference centered on how to cut off services to bookies.

Continental Press, with headquarters in Cleveland, received a going over at the hearing by attorneys and police officials.

Continental's network was described by James Gorrell, attorney for Western Union. Gorrell gave a list of Ohio firms leasing wires that carry racing news. It contains the names of nearly 40 customers of Western Union clients.

Looking Ahead

A long time ago a man with considerable wisdom penned the following line: "The foundations of morality are like all other foundations: if you dig too much about them the superstructure will come tumbling down."

As I've traveled back and forth across the country on speaking engagements in recent months, many anxious people have asked the question: "What is happening to the morality ofour country?"

It is heartening to find such anxiety being expressed in many sections of the nation, for its presence suggests that in the main our American society still is wholesome. It also suggests that those in public and private life who chose to disregard a code of ethics based on high moral principles may not continue endlessly to enjoy public respect and personal good fortune. However, until this anxiety becomes more widespread and provokes remedial action there exists a very clear threat to the whole moral structure of our nation.

But to get to the question of "What's happening. . .?" Gen. MacArthur, in his Boston speech, said that much of the injury to our moral foundations could be traced to Communists and their dupes. He said, "(They) seek through covert manipulation of the civil power and the media of public information and education to pervert the truth, impair respect for moral values . . . and in the end destroy our faith in our religious teachings."

THIS CALCULATED campaign has already obtained some acceptance for a code of behavior that fixes no penalty on dishonesty and dishonor. This fact is made startlingly clear by the series of scandals centering in the nation's capital, and the tolerant attitude of a great many people toward these scandals. Dishonest public officials are the best helpers the Communists have.

Every dishonest or dishonorable act of a national office holder which is publicized in the press and yet goes unpunished exposes the character of every boy and girl in America to serious and lasting injury. And it weakens the moral strength of every adult citizen, impairs his respect for moral values.

On my desk is a collection of newspaper and magazine articles sent to me by worried people who are asking the question, "What's wrong. . .?"

On top is an article entitled "The Scandalous Years" published in Look Magazine. The heading reads: "Washington's political scandals, breeding on friendships, favoritism and frauds, have made shocking news, quickly forgotten. The record stamps these as years of immorality, corruption—the shameful era of Pendergastism in Washington."

This shocking 5,000-word article is not partisan. It was written by two highly objective Washington reporters and no one, to my knowledge, has challenged the authenticity of a single one of its long list of sordid facts involving the very highest public officials.

Yet it has created only a ripple of reaction among our citizenry.

A newspaper clipping from the Arkansas Gazette is headed: "Corruption in Government Called Worst in All History." A "Fair Deal" Congressman is quoted: "Never in our history has our government been so venal, so degraded, so corrupt as it is now." An editorial in the St. Louis Globe Democrat is entitled: "Low Estate of Public Morals." It says, "The youths such as the West Pointers (discharged for cheating) have grown into manhood in an environment of 'take-it-where-I-find-it.' They are the unpretty fruit of the mistakes of the past two decades."

THERE ARE clippings from the St. Louis Post Dispatch alleging "influence peddling" by the national chairman of one of the major political parties; from a Washington paper reporting the RFC scandals and facts about the mink coat worn by a White House secretary; etc. In all there are 22 clippings reporting dishonorable and dishonest acts that strike damaging blows against the foundations of morality in America.

Honor is the backbone of Christian civilization. If we permit the vertebrae to decay one by one, man's ability to go forward, toward higher human attainment, will be destroyed. And must we not also realize, before it's too late, that so long as they are condoned these dishonorable and dishonest acts now transpiring in high places must stand as an indictment—before the world and before God—of all of us?

GI Is Blamed For Attack

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27—Thomas Hiam, 25, of Shaker Heights probably will wait a long time before he picks up another soldier.

Hiam is in satisfactory condition today in Glenville hospital after being slashed on the neck and robbed by a GI who asked for a ride as Hiam left Cleveland Union Terminal.

The GI told Hiam that he was going to Buffalo and as they drove on the Memorial Shoreway he cut him with a sharp instrument and took his wallet and watch.

THE APOSTLES WENT EVERYWHERE, PREACHING THE WORD

Scripture—Isaiah 60:1-3; Acts 1:4-8; 8:4-8, 26-29, 35-38; Romans 15:14-29.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THIS IS the last lesson of this series. It is to be hoped that we have gained a new conception of what it is to live in "one world," and to treat all peoples with sympathy and brotherly understanding.

In this lesson we learn how the disciples spread the gospel to far countries after Stephen's martyrdom. Instead of abolishing this new religion, the persecutions spread it farther than it ever had gone before, and included Gentiles as well as Jews.

A map of the Mediterranean world at the time of Christ would be helpful. It should include Ethiopia, as our lesson mentions that country.

Forty days after His resurrection, Jesus "assembled" with His disciples, and commanded them not to leave Jerusalem after He had left them, but to stay until they received the power through baptism of the Holy Ghost. "For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." He then ascended into heaven.

After they had received that power, Jesus told them, "ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

Stephen being stoned to death, with Saul's (afterwards Paul's) consent, the persecutions spread, so the apostles scattered abroad, but everywhere they went they preached Christ to the people. Philip went to the city of Samaria and preached to the people of that city—usually out of the bounds for Jews.

After this the angel of the Lord told Philip to go south to the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert."

Philip obeyed the command and he saw a man of Ethiopia, "an eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship."

This writer recently learned that in those days Candace was not the given name of a certain person, but the common name for queen, as Pharaoh was of the ruler of Egypt. There were several candaces of Ethiopia.

The eunuch, slave of kings and princes, often became an important and trusted person in a household.

This man was sitting in his chariot reading scripture. The spirit that had prompted Philip to go to the road where the eunuch was riding, told him to go near and join the eunuch.

Philip did so, asking the man if he understood what he was reading. He answered, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" and he asked Philip to climb up in the chariot and sit with him.

The eunuch was reading: "He was led as a lamb to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened He not his mouth: In His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? for His life is taken from the earth."

"Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus."

Jesus it was, Philip explained, who was "led like a lamb to the slaughter," and he, Philip, was taking His message to all who would listen since the Lord was taken to heaven.

Coming to some water, the eunuch asked what would prevent him from being baptized? Philip said there was nothing to prevent it if he really believed with all his heart. The man answered, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of God," and he stopped his retinue beside the water and was baptized.

Philip, in case you have forgotten, was one of seven good men, full of the Holy Spirit and of wisdom, who were appointed to take care of the administrative affairs of the Jerusalem church, especially the distribution of funds for the poor.

Isaiah prophesied that the Gentiles should come to the light, "and kings to the brightness of Thy rising.

"Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to Thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side."

Promising to come to the Romans as soon as possible, Paul wrote to them that he now must go to Jerusalem to "minister unto the saints."

These saints of the church were in want, and Paul wrote the Romans, that contributions for them had come from as far away as Macedonia and Achaia, "Yea, it hath been their good pleasure; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, they owe it to them (the saints) also to minister unto them in carnal things."

Brothers all, you see, and Jews and Gentiles, and now all the earth can share in the good tidings—peoples of whom no one had heard in the time of Philip, Peter and Paul.

NOTICES TO BE GIVEN

City Water Treatment Expected Here Next Week

Treatment of Circleville water with a commercial chemical preparation to keep it clear is expected to start next week.

Ervin Leist, water department manager, said the commercial preparation is Calgon. The chemical works by holding iron particles in suspension. It is expected to solve the problem of "red water" in Circleville mains.

The water department decided to treat the water with Calgon after complaints of laundry stained by the discolored water began to snowball in Leist's office.

To acquaint customers of the treatment letters are being mailed out by the water department. The letters contain the following information:

"A SO-CALLED "threshold treatment", using an inorganic chemical named "sodium hexametaphosphate", is being added in the proportion of three pounds to a million pounds of water. This treatment is used in many water works and has specific approval by the State Department of Health for use in our system.

This treatment will prevent the deposition of calcium carbonate in the water distribution system and in your hot water heaters. It will also have the effect of minimizing corrosion.

"During the first several weeks of this treatment we will be loosening some of the deposits which already exist in the old water mains. This loosened material must be flushed out of the mains.

"It is planned to do this flushing weekly on Sundays, when it should interfere least with the household use of water. Until the remaining solids settle after flushing there will be a muddy appearance to the water for a few hours.

"We are notifying all consumers in advance so that the cause of this turbidity will be understood. Once the water mains are cleared and the deposits stabilized, there should be few, if any, complaints of red or muddy water in the future.

"AS THIS TREATMENT proceeds, it will be advisable for each householder to flush out his hot water tank, for existing deposits in the tank will be loosened and should be removed. Further corrosion or deposits in the tanks will be controlled by the treatment.

"In this process of improving our water supply and clearing the water mains, we ask your cooperation and patience. The final results will be well worth the temporary inconvenience."

Aspiring sailors need not have teeth. The Navy will provide.

Ready-Mixed Concrete Prices To Be Adjusted

The Office of Price Stabilization Thursday took action to permit resellers of cement and manufacturers of ready-mixed concrete to increase their ceiling prices in some instances.

The reason given for the raise, according to Clyde C. McBee, Columbus district OPS director, was to reflect dollars-and-cents increases in cost on cement purchased from "out-of-area" sources of supply.

Sudden expansion in defense construction and related projects in many areas has resulted in an abnormal drain on local supplies of cement. Resellers and ready-mixed concrete manufacturers in these areas have been unable to meet the demand for cement through their normal sources of supply.

Normally, because of the bulk nature of cement, resellers and concrete manufacturers purchase their supply from nearby sources, and their current ceiling prices reflect nearby "in-area" cost.

Promising to come to the Romans as soon as possible, Paul wrote to them that he now must go to Jerusalem to "minister unto the saints."

These saints of the church were in want, and Paul wrote the Romans, that contributions for them had come from as far away as Macedonia and Achaia, "Yea, it hath been their good pleasure; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, they owe it to them (the saints) also to minister unto them in carnal things."

Brothers all, you see, and Jews and Gentiles, and now all the earth can share in the good tidings—peoples of whom no one had heard in the time of Philip, Peter and Paul.

City Water Treatment Expected Here Next Week

Treatment of Circleville water with a commercial chemical preparation to keep it clear is expected to start next week.

Ervin Leist, water department manager, said the commercial preparation is Calgon. The chemical works by holding iron particles in suspension. It is expected to solve the problem of "red water" in Circleville mains.

The water department decided to treat the water with Calgon after complaints of laundry stained by the discolored water began to snowball in Leist's office.

To acquaint customers of the treatment letters are being mailed out by the water department. The letters contain the following information:

"A SO-CALLED "threshold treatment", using an inorganic chemical named "sodium hexametaphosphate", is being added in the proportion of three pounds to a million pounds of water. This treatment is used in many water works and has specific approval by the State Department of Health for use in our system.

This treatment will prevent the deposition of calcium carbonate in the water distribution system and in your hot water heaters. It will also have the effect of minimizing corrosion.

"During the first several weeks of this treatment we will be loosening some of the deposits which already exist in the old water mains. This loosened material must be flushed out of the mains.

"It is planned to do this flushing weekly on Sundays, when it should interfere least with the household use of water. Until the remaining solids settle after flushing there will be a muddy appearance to the water for a few hours.

"We are notifying all consumers in advance so that the cause of this turbidity will be understood. Once the water mains are cleared and the deposits stabilized, there should be few, if any, complaints of red or muddy water in the future.

"AS THIS TREATMENT proceeds, it will be advisable for each householder to flush out his hot water tank, for existing deposits in the tank will be loosened and should be removed. Further corrosion or deposits in the tanks will be controlled by the treatment.

"In this process of improving our water supply and clearing the water mains, we ask your cooperation and patience. The final results will be well worth the temporary inconvenience."

Aspiring sailors need not have teeth. The Navy will provide.

Ready-Mixed Concrete Prices To Be Adjusted

The Office of Price Stabilization Thursday took action to permit resellers of cement and manufacturers of ready-mixed concrete to increase their ceiling prices in some instances.

The reason given for the raise, according to Clyde C. McBee, Columbus district OPS director, was to reflect dollars-and-cents increases in cost on cement purchased from "out-of-area" sources of supply.

Sudden expansion in defense construction and related projects in many areas has resulted in an abnormal drain on local supplies of cement. Resellers and ready-mixed concrete manufacturers in these areas have been unable to meet the demand for cement through their normal sources of supply.

Normally, because of the bulk nature of cement, resellers and concrete manufacturers purchase their supply from nearby sources, and their current ceiling prices reflect nearby "in-area" cost.

Navy Planning To Award 1,800 Scholarships Soon

The Navy has announced the annual competition for the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

All male high school seniors and graduates between the ages of 17 and 21 are eligible to apply for the program which gives a full four year, government sponsored, college education at one of the 52 colleges and universities throughout the country in which there are Naval ROTC units.

In addition to the age limits, applicants must meet physical and mental standards and successfully pass an aptitude test. Young men desiring to participate in the program must file an application for this test prior to Nov. 17, 1951.

Application blanks and complete information concerning the program are available from all high school principals, college deans, professors of naval science, Officers of Naval Officer Procurement, and all Navy recruiting stations.

The test itself will be given Dec. 8 in 500 cities widely distributed in the 48 states, as well as Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and Canal Zone.

Applicants receiving satisfactory marks on the aptitude test will be interviewed and given physical examinations at a later date. State selection committees will then review their cases to select the most outstanding all-around candidates.

STUDENTS FROM each state and territory compete among themselves, for the quota of naval scholarships assigned each state and territory. The total input is expected to approximate 1800, all of whom will be enrolled in the Fall term of college, 1952.

Candidates are permitted to indicate the college they wish to attend, and subject to quota limitations, will be recommended to the college of their choice. Final enrollment in all cases, however, will be subject to acceptance by the colleges to which recommended.

In this program, the Navy Department bears the expense of tuition, books, and the normal fees required by the college; and in addition, provides the student with a $50 per month living allowance.

With certain limitations the student may take any course that he desires leading to a bachelor or higher degree, but must include in his curriculum prescribed naval subjects.

In return, he is obliged to participate in naval drills and cruises, and if qualified upon graduation to accept a commission in the regular Navy or Marine Corps. After two years of active duty, he may elect to transfer to the appropriate reserve component and return to civilian life; or he may request retention in the regular service and if selected, make the Navy or Marine Corps his career.

Students enrolled in this program will be deferred from induction under the Selective Service Act, pending completion of their academic course. They must however, agree to serve on active duty for two years when graduated and commissioned.

Ohio People To Decide Road Quality Program

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27—State Highway Director T. J. Kauer today called upon "all concerned" to cooperate in improving Ohio's inflation-stricken highway program.

Addressing a meeting of the Building Owners and Managers Association in Cleveland, the director said lack of sufficient funds was mainly responsible for the condition of Ohio roads.

He pointed out that inflation and a tripled volume of traffic, topped by the severe frost damage of last Winter, have created tremendous burdens on the state's highway program.

Kauer said tests conducted in Maryland "clearly indicated that damage to roads is directly proportional to the number and weight of axle loads."

As a result of the tests, he said, a needs study conducted in Ohio showed $2 billion would be needed to bring the state's roads up to standard.

The director added:

"I firmly believe that the provision of adequate financing of the needed modernization is well within the economic ability and willingness of the people of Ohio to provide."

Word 'Korea' To Go On GI Grave Markers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—The Department of Defense will begin immediately to inscribe the word "Korea" on grave markers and headstones of U. S. dead returned from Korea, or whose death is attributable to service in Korea.

Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett advised President Truman today: "At my request the service secretaries considered the matter and agreed upon the use of the word "Korea" as an appropriate inscription. . . . Accordingly, I am directing that this practice be placed in effect immediately."

Use of the word "Korea" will satisfy official requirements and limitations and at the same time will permit the Department of Defense to comply with requests of next of kin in connection with inscription recognition of cause as well as place of death, Lovett said.

Lovett's directive was made retroactive to permit addition of the Korean designation on grave markers and headstones of U. S. dead previously laid to rest. National cemetery regulations prescribe that the inscription on government headstones may contain the name, date of birth and death and abbreviations of military awards held, a religious emblem, and "the war in which service was rendered."

The regulations do not apply to the graves of servicemen buried in other than national cemeteries. These markers and monuments are of private concern and may be marked in whatever manner the family or relatives determine.

Peace Too Precious To Be Made Political Football, Truman Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—President Truman declared today that world peace and human welfare "are too precious to be made the footballs of partisan politics."

The chief executive told a Democratic Women's Day radio audience that the solemn decisions which face the country today must be based on "facts, not fables."

Mr. Truman declared that "the enemies of progress try to confuse the issues, but they cannot obscure the plain facts.

"Your government is trying to bring about peace in the world and steadily increasing prosperity here at home.

"With the help of the women of America, we will continue to advance toward those goals."

THE PRESIDENT spoke as part of a radio program observing the 32nd anniversary of the day women were admitted to Democratic Party high councils for the first time. Mr. Truman said:

"World peace and human welfare are too precious to be made the footballs of partisan politics. They must not be jeopardized by men who are careless with the truth.

"When we face such solemn decisions as those which now confront our country, we must act on the basis of facts, not fables."

Mr. Truman reminded his audience that the Democratic Party is now beginning to prepare for next year's political campaign. He said that Democratic women were observing their political anniversary in order to begin work on the 1952 national election campaign.

Congress Eyes Resolution To Assist Irish

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Today promises to be a great day for the Irish!

For the house will probably go on record as favoring a plebiscite in Ireland to determine whether the people there favor unification.

The Irish have been working toward this for 32 years, ever since the House adopted a similar resolution in 1919.

They feel that anoption of the 1919 resolution helped bring about the formation of the Irish Free State, now the Republic of Ireland, and hope adoption of a new resolution will help spur unification in the Emerald Isle. Northern Ireland, consisting of six counties, is part of Great Britain.

There are those in the House who oppose the resolution on the ground it represents American interference in the domestic affairs of an ally, Great Britain. But the consensus is that their opposition will be swept away.

Controversial Railroad Pension Bill Is Debated

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 — A bitter battle is shaping up in the House of Representatives today over railroad pensions.

The controversy has split the railroad labor unions, federal agencies, the House interstate and foreign commerce committee, which has legislative jurisdiction, and Democrats and Republicans generally.

It has placed congressmen, not directly involved in the controversy, in the middle because they will be required to vote, probably this week or next, on two-sharply divergent proposals.

All sides are agreed on but one thing, and that is that pensions and annuities paid to retired railroad workers and their families are insufficient and must be boosted without delay. From thereon the views differ widely

Two bills will be before the House. One will be the committee bill sponsored by a Democratic - Republican "majority" headed by Rep. Wolverton, (R) N. J., generally regarded as a liberal.

* * *

THE OTHER will be a substitute sponsored by a "minority" of nine Democrats and three Republicans, headed by committee Chairman Crosser, (D) Ohio, long-time friend of railroad labor.

The substitute bill is the measure originally introduced by Crosser, but shelved by the committee "majority" which adopted instead a measure sponsored by Rep. Leonard W. Hall, (R) N. Y.

The official committee bill provides an across-the-board increase of 15 percent to annuitants and pensioners and 33 1-3 percent to survivors effective immediately upon enactment of the legislation.

The bill eliminates all controversial issues on the theory that a swift increase in pensions and annuities is the important thing.

The Crosser bill, which the chairman will seek to substitute for the committee measure on the floor, is much more comprehensive. It is backed by the non-operating railroad unions.

It provides substantially a 15 percent increase in retirement benefits, the same as the Hall bill. However, this is supplemented by a spouses annuity under which the wife of a retired railroad worker who has reached 65 or has a minor child would receive about half her husband's benefits.

IN ADDITION, the Crosser bill increases from $300 to $400 per month the maximum compensation to be credited in computing annuities.

This would bring in an additional $80 million annually in revenue for the $2.5 billion railroad retirement fund. But representatives of the railroad operating brotherhoods oppose this provision on the ground, it would, in many cases, increase an individual's tax from the present $18 to $24 a month.

Teen Tips

"How can I say 'No' without offending my date?" is the question in many 'teen girls' letters.

It's a good question, because there are so many times in every girl's life when she must say "No", but must do it tactfully and graciously enough to avoid hurt feelings and misunderstandings.

No is an important little word when you want to refuse a date without hurting a boy's feelings or must refuse a date, yet you want another invitation from the boy. Then there's also the problem of goodnight kisses. . .how to say no without losing dates with a boy you like—or think you'll like when you get to know him better. See how important that little word can be?

To refuse an invitation when you don't want to date the boy, say something like this: "Thanks. I'm sorry I'll be busy and can't go. . ." without any mention of another date.

When you must refuse a date, from him: "Thanks. I'd love to go and am sorry that I'll be busy and can't make it. Can I have a rain-check?" To make the date as definite as possible, add "Would some time next week be convenient? Friday night?"

To avoid a goodnight kiss: "Not THIS time." This isn't too final! It lets him know that perhaps when you know him better.

Former Mental Patient Nabbed

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27 — Two Cleveland policemen and rescue squad firemen used tear gas late yesterday to rout a former mental patient from a locked bathroom in his home.

Paul Pavese, 74, released from Cleveland state hospital a month ago, locked himself in after beating his wife, Carmella, 60, in their west side home.

The patrolmen, wearing gas masks, broke their gas bomb at the bathroom door and then grabbed Pavese as he ran out of the room. Pavese was taken back to the hospital last night.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

YOU'RE going to be surprised about lots of things the first time you and this Buick get out on the road.

Take the easy way it responds to your every wish—steps away from a stop light—soars up a hill—lets loose a surge of power at the touch of your toe on the treadle—or gentles to a stop at the touch of the brakes.

Take the way it rides the road—with an easy stride, sure-footed on turns, level as a lance on straightaways.

Take the way it steers—so light and true that it seems to guide itself.

Take its ease of control. More than a million owners now know the wondrous freedom from tension and strain that goes with Dynaflow Drive.*

It's easy to see where this eager beauty gets its standout performance, when you glance at the list of all-star engineering features shown above.

But how about price? Can you afford it?

"Easy does it" is the answer to that one too.

Fact is—if you can afford a new car, you can afford a Buick. Better come in to see us soon.

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice.
Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on other Series.*

Saddler Retains Title As Willie Pep Begs Off After Nine Rounds

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—It's getting so you can forecast what happens when Sandy Saddler fights Willie Pep for the featherweight championship.

Willie loses the fight sitting on his stool, Sandy points out that "Pep started the dirty stuff first" and the referee gets hit oftener than anybody.

Details were not available immediately as to when the next Saddler-Pep fight will occur but Willie, who couldn't answer the bell for the tenth round at the polo grounds last night, now trails three victories to one.

If they hold it on a World Series basis, Saddler needs only one more triumph to retire the title.

LAST NIGHT'S battle was an ugly, dirty, vicious brawl, witnessed by 13,836 fans who paid $75,311. It went to Saddler as Willie quit on his stool for the second straight time, an injured eye being the reason as opposed to last year's dislocated shoulder. But Sandy, the beanpole Harlemite, invites little credit. He hits harder than Willie. He holds on pretty good, too.

Willie, for that matter, is no certified Samaritan. He is capable of placing his open hand, thumb foremost, in his opponent's mush. One time last night he put that pushing paw into the referee's puss by mistake, and you know who went down? The referee.

Pep and Saddler murmured their felicitations and for the next half hour threw every punch ever invented—and a couple still pending in the patent office.

Miller had to wrestle them apart time and again. Twice they kept battling after the round was over.

THE FIGHT ENDED in the same tenor. Willie sat on his stool, moaning that his right eye which had been cut open in the second round when he went down for an eight count, was paining him.

"I don't want to go on," he said.

"He doesn't want to go on," said Referee Miller to Dr. Nardiello.

"Shut up, Miller!" yelled Pep's trainer, Bill Gore. "You keep out of this."

"I want to quit," Pep said to Gore.

"You shut up, too," Gore said to him.

Referee Miller stopped it—finally. Lovely night.

Montreal Wins First Test In Little Series

MONTREAL, Sept. 27—The Montreal Royals of the International League hold a one-game advantage over Milwaukee today with their 6-3 victory in the opener of the Little World Series at Montreal.

The Brooklyn farm club, behind the eight-hit pitching of Chris Van Cyuk and Reliever Tom Lasorda, exploded for four runs in the second inning, which was cushion enough last night.

Two more tallies in the sixth after the brewers picked up a brace of runs in the fifth frame allowed Montreal to coast to the end before 11,691 fans.

Lasorda held the American association champs to a single safety after taking over in the eighth from Van Cuyk, who had run into trouble.

Murray Wall, the first of four Brewer hurlers, was tagged with the loss.

CHS Ready To Begin SCO Season

Hurricane Power To Be Tested

Circleville's 1951 Tiger football team will travel to Wilmington Friday night to open its South Central Ohio League season.

The Tigers are defenders of the last three years in the SCO loop, having taken the title in 1948, 1949 and 1950 without a league loss in that period.

But most important, the Tigers will be out to test the power of the Hurricane aggregation touted by many as the up and coming team in the league.

Wilmington has given evidence of its prowess in its two matches to date this season, winning its opener against Xenia Central by a 20-0 count and handily defeating Lebanon by a 40-7 margin last Friday night.

CIRCLEVILLE, on the other hand, has split so far this season, dropping its first encounter by a 6-0 margin to Holy Rosary while besting Lancaster's Golden Gales 7-0 here last Friday.

In both games, the Tigers have shown themselves as a defensive power, although nervousness at the crucial points has limited its offensive power.

Wilmington, on the other hand, has exhibited a powerful offensive game to date, while at the same time holding its opposition to only one score in two games.

In last Friday night's Wilmington-Lebanon contest, the Hurricane crew gobbled up a total of 407 yards net gain from scrimmage, earning 12 first downs and completing the only pass it attempted in the test.

And all of this it registered without the services of its running ace, Ronnie Dolphin, who showed up favorably during the grid preview in Washington C. H.

* * *

DOLPHIN WILL be back into the lineup Friday night against the Tigers, however, pitting his efforts with those of powerful Jim Brooks at fullback for the Hurricane offensive spearhead.

Both teams will be about equally matched in size during the contest.

Score of the Circleville-Wilmington SCOL opener is expected to be low, due to the defensive prowess of the Tigers.

Circleville, meanwhile, has completed its body contact work for this week and will wind up its sessions with an under the lights warmup Thursday evening.

Coach Steve Brudzinski said Thursday the morale of the Tiger aggregation is high and that the team is in good shape physically for the league opener.

Circleville will be clad in all red during its Friday road trip. The Tiger team will leave here at about 5:15 p. m. and will stop in Wilmington after the game for food.

Probable starting lineup for the Wilmington team in the league opener is as follows:

Ends—Evan Haines and Bill Morris.

Tackles—Jim Bonecutter and Bob Snyder.

Guards—Ken Smith and Dick Ewbank.

Center—J. R. Riggin.

Quarterback—John Morris.

Halfbacks — Ronnie Dolphin and Gene Bailey.

Fullback—Jim Brooks.

Saddler Retains Title As Willie Pep Begs Off After Nine Rounds

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—It's getting so you can forecast what happens when Sandy Saddler fights Willie Pep for the featherweight championship.

Willie loses the fight sitting on his stool, Sandy points out that "Pep started the dirty stuff first" and the referee gets hit oftener than anybody.

Details were not available immediately as to when the next Saddler-Pep fight will occur but Willie, who couldn't answer the bell for the tenth round at the polo grounds last night, now trails three victories to one.

If they hold it on a World Series basis, Saddler needs only one more triumph to retire the title.

LAST NIGHT'S battle was an ugly, dirty, vicious brawl, witnessed by 13,836 fans who paid $75,311. It went to Saddler as Willie quit on his stool for the second straight time, an injured eye being the reason as opposed to last year's dislocated shoulder. But Sandy, the beanpole Harlemite, invites little credit. He hits harder than Willie. He holds on pretty good, too.

Willie, for that matter, is no certified Samaritan. He is capable of placing his open hand, thumb foremost, in his opponent's mush. One time last night he put that pushing paw into the referee's puss by mistake, and you know who went down? The referee.

Pep and Saddler murmured their felicitations and for the next half hour threw every punch ever invented—and a couple still pending in the patent office.

Miller had to wrestle them apart time and again. Twice they kept battling after the round was over.

THE FIGHT ENDED in the same tenor. Willie sat on his stool, moaning that his right eye which had been cut open in the second round when he went down for an eight count, was paining him.

"I don't want to go on," he said.

"He doesn't want to go on," said Referee Miller to Dr. Nardiello.

"Shut up, Miller!" yelled Pep's trainer, Bill Gore. "You keep out of this."

"I want to quit," Pep said to Gore.

"You shut up, too," Gore said to him.

Referee Miller stopped it—finally. Lovely night.

Montreal Wins First Test In Little Series

MONTREAL, Sept. 27—The Montreal Royals of the International League hold a one-game advantage over Milwaukee today with their 6-3 victory in the opener of the Little World Series at Montreal.

The Brooklyn farm club, behind the eight-hit pitching of Chris Van Cyuk and Reliever Tom Lasorda, exploded for four runs in the second inning, which was cushion enough last night.

Two more tallies in the sixth after the brewers picked up a brace of runs in the fifth frame allowed Montreal to coast to the end before 11,691 fans.

Lasorda held the American association champs to a single safety after taking over in the eighth from Van Cuyk, who had run into trouble.

Murray Wall, the first of four Brewer hurlers, was tagged with the loss.

CHS Ready To Begin SCO Season

Hurricane Power To Be Tested

Circleville's 1951 Tiger football team will travel to Wilmington Friday night to open its South Central Ohio League season.

The Tigers are defenders of the last three years in the SCO loop, having taken the title in 1948, 1949 and 1950 without a league loss in that period.

But most important, the Tigers will be out to test the power of the Hurricane aggregation touted by many as the up and coming team in the league.

Wilmington has given evidence of its prowess in its two matches to date this season, winning its opener against Xenia Central by a 20-0 count and handily defeating Lebanon by a 40-7 margin last Friday night.

CIRCLEVILLE, on the other hand, has split so far this season, dropping its first encounter by a 6-0 margin to Holy Rosary while besting Lancaster's Golden Gales 7-0 here last Friday.

In both games, the Tigers have shown themselves as a defensive power, although nervousness at the crucial points has limited its offensive power.

Wilmington, on the other hand, has exhibited a powerful offensive game to date, while at the same time holding its opposition to only one score in two games.

In last Friday night's Wilmington-Lebanon contest, the Hurricane crew gobbled up a total of 407 yards net gain from scrimmage, earning 12 first downs and completing the only pass it attempted in the test.

And all of this it registered without the services of its running ace, Ronnie Dolphin, who showed up favorably during the grid preview in Washington C. H.

* * *

DOLPHIN WILL be back into the lineup Friday night against the Tigers, however, pitting his efforts with those of powerful Jim Brooks at fullback for the Hurricane offensive spearhead.

Both teams will be about equally matched in size during the contest.

Score of the Circleville-Wilmington SCOL opener is expected to be low, due to the defensive prowess of the Tigers.

Circleville, meanwhile, has completed its body contact work for this week and will wind up its sessions with an under the lights warmup Thursday evening.

Coach Steve Brudzinski said Thursday the morale of the Tiger aggregation is high and that the team is in good shape physically for the league opener.

Circleville will be clad in all red during its Friday road trip. The Tiger team will leave here at about 5:15 p. m. and will stop in Wilmington after the game for food.

Probable starting lineup for the Wilmington team in the league opener is as follows:

Ends—Evan Haines and Bill Morris.

Tackles—Jim Bonecutter and Bob Snyder.

Guards—Ken Smith and Dick Ewbank.

Center—J. R. Riggin.

Quarterback—John Morris.

Halfbacks — Ronnie Dolphin and Gene Bailey.

Fullback—Jim Brooks.

1951 CHASE ENDS SUNDAY

Brooks And Giants Keep NL Flag Race In Sizzle

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—On rode the Giants and up woke the Dodgers today. And everybody who had World Series tickets to both parks lived happily ever after.

The dog-eat-dog National League pennant fracas showed the Brooklyns still a game up front, but the Giants apparently don't believe in figures.

Grimly determined to go with their boots on if they must, the Giants are putting up the greatest fight since a guy named Custer.

With the knowledge that the Bums had shed their panic by blasting the Boston Braves, 15 to 5, in a day contest, Durocher's fandies kept pace by methodically destroying the Philadelphia Phillies at night, 10 to 1.

THE 35TH WIN in their last 42 games kept the Giants right in the thick of things and justified the news that World Series ducats can now be obtained at the Polo Grounds.

It all can mean nothing, however, if Brooklyn has the right shoe on the right foot from now on. The Dodgers need to win three of their remaining four games to close the door in Durocher's face

After their nearly-fatal double loss to the Braves Tuesday night, the Brooks had to come back strong, or else. They came back with a loud bang that saw six Boston hurlers smashed for 14 hits.

Don Newcombe, called on by Charlie Dressen to hurl the "must" game, recorded his 19th win of the year.

IRVIN, THE league's runs-batted-in leader, raised his total to 119 with his 23rd homer, a triple and a double that highlighted a nine-hit, nine-walk Giants attack on Ken Johnson and five relievers.

The Giants have two games left. They must win them both and Brooklyn must lose three in order for New York to take the flag. If Brooklyn loses two while New York wins two, the race will end in a tie.

The Philadelphia Athletics, who have knocked the Yanks out of first place on three different occasions this season, did the Bombers dirt again yesterday.

Little Bobby Shantz pitched a six-hitter and the A's cracked out three homers as they beat the American League pace-setters, 4 to 1.

THE STENGELMEN still need only two wins to clinch the flag and they have five left, all with the Red Sox beginning Friday.

The best the Bosox can hope for is a tie. They were licked for the second straight time by the Washington Senators, 7-3, and must win all their remaining six games for a deadlock.

The second-place Indians, two and a half behind the Yankees, don't play again until Saturday, when they open a season-ending two-game series with the Detroit Tigers.

In the only other game played yesterday, Ned Garver won his 19th of the season as the St. Louis Browns defeated the Tigers, 7-1.

If Mr. Truman is to proud of Hoover's work, why does he prevent the full implementation of these reports? If he wants to credit jump in favor of Acheson, why did the secretary of state make it so tough for Hoover when the commission was in session? Also, why does the Post-office Department still fight the proposals for making that agency of government more efficient by modernizing its methods?

Brooks And Giants Keep NL Flag Race In Sizzle

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—On rode the Giants and up woke the Dodgers today. And everybody who had World Series tickets to both parks lived happily ever after.

The dog-eat-dog National League pennant fracas showed the Brooklyns still a game up front, but the Giants apparently don't believe in figures.

Little Bobby Shantz pitched a six-hitter and the A's cracked out three homers as they beat the American League pace-setters, 4 to 1.

THE STENGELMEN still need only two wins to clinch the flag and they have five left, all with the Red Sox beginning Friday.

The best the Bosox can hope for is a tie. They were licked for the second straight time by the Washington Senators, 7-3, and must win all their remaining six games for a deadlock.

The second-place Indians, two and a half behind the Yankees, don't play again until Saturday, when they open a season-ending two-game series with the Detroit Tigers.

In the only other game played yesterday, Ned Garver won his 19th of the season as the St. Louis Browns defeated the Tigers, 7-1.

If Mr. Truman is to proud of Hoover's work, why does he prevent the full implementation of these reports? If he wants to credit jump in favor of Acheson, why did the secretary of state make it so tough for Hoover when the commission was in session? Also, why does the Post-office Department still fight the proposals for making that agency of government more efficient by modernizing its methods?

Circleville Medical Officer Home After Year In Korea

Capt. Brown Assigned As Surgeon

Localite Gives Views Of Battle

Probably one of the happiest families in Circleville is that of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Brown and son, Bob.

Capt. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rockford Brown of 403 East Mound street, recently rejoined his family after serving more than a year as a front line surgeon in Korea.

The Circleville Army medic was assigned to the 3rd battalion, 35th regiment of the 25th Infantry in July, 1950, when that unit effected a landing at Pusan.

As battalion surgeon often operating his aid station right at the front lines, the Circleville captain saw action immediately after the landing of his unit.

HE ALSO FOUGHT through the retreat of United Nations forces into South Korea and was a member of the fighting team which defended Pusan.

As a result of his service in Korea, Brown has said he feels a negotiated truce is not probable.

"The Communists want to keep us torn up and they can do that best by dragging us through the horrors of this war," he said, adding:

"If the war in Korea does stop, I believe it will break out in another place."

The Circleville captain also has observed that the Communist Chinese forces fight with "a fanaticism due chiefly to fear."

He said the majority of the Chinese soldiers fight because they have been warned they will be killed if they do not.

Brown said that the Communist forces have received practically all of their equipment from the Russians, although he says he has never heard of a Russian soldier having been seen in combat.

THE CAPTAIN said that when he arrived with his regiment the morale of the U. S. troops was low, principally because "they did not know why they were fighting."

He said, however, that when he left Korea recently the morale was excellent and that anyone who had been through a Winter in Korea would not have to stay for a second one.

"The policy on rotation," Brown said, "is to send a man back after he has had six months on the front or a year in the rear areas.

"The men look forward to this and, while six months is a long time to stay alive on the front, it is a goal to shoot for."

Giving praise to the allied groups of the UN forces, the captain said "the Allies, especially the Turks and British, are excellent soldiers.

"I have seen the Turks take ordinary cooking lard and spread it on bread as if it were butter. They love to eat that kind of thing and they fight like demons.

* * *

"THE BRITISH have about one division in Korea now and most of their boys are professionals. They fight well and have a knowledge of jungle warfare which some of our boys don't have."

Capt. Brown was graduated by Circleville high school and completed his medical training in Greenville, Tenn.

He maried Nancy Cowles of Greenville and the couple was stationed on Okinawa when their son, Bobby, was born.

Brown is expected to spend several weeks' leave with his parents in Circleville before returning to duty with the 3rd Army in the South.

Diplomats Predict Harriman Due To Try Again To Solve Oil Tiff

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—Diplomatic quarters predict today that the U. S. presidential trouble-shooter, W. Averell Harriman, soon will renew his role as mediator in the Iranian crisis.

It is assumed that this will call for Harriman to make another flying trip to Tehran, where he barely missed a settlement between recalcitrant elements on both sides on his first attempt.

Reports from London said that British Prime Minister Attlee has sent a request to President Truman that the U. S. use its good offices to try to reach a settlement.

Other reports from Tehran also said that the Iranian government had sent a similar request, directly to Harriman, through Loy Henderson, newly-appointed ambassador to the Persian capital.

THE WHOLE situation was canvassed thoroughly at a meeting in which Secretary of State Acheson, British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks and Harriman surveyed the situation.

It was understood, though not admitted by the State Department, that Franks brought Attlee's request and that some formula for healing the rapidly deteriorating situation was discussed.

This, it is believed, may indicate that the British are willing to make some concessions, since Harriman is known to feel that they have taken a stiff position not in line with what other powers have been obliged to accept in nations where nationalization has taken effect.

Harriman, however, has also shown a determined attitude in dealing with Iranian Premier Mohamed Mossadegh.

He recently refused to forward to London a 15-day ultimatum from Mossadegh and accused his government of backing down from agreement reached in earlier negotiations.

More people were married in the United States in 1950 than in any other year from 1946. A total of 1,669,934 couples took vows.

Armies Of Rats Being Fought By Boston Engineers

BOSTON, Sept. 27 — Massachusetts is engaged today in a war against tremendous armies of rats infesting two centuries-old areas of Boston where a huge traffic artery is being built.

Officials said that workers entering ancient buildings condemned to make way for the central highway were warned by the occupants to "take clubs with them if they were going into the cellars."

The state ran into the rat problem when work started in Boston's west end, near the Charles river, and the historic north end, bordering on Boston harbor.

Mountainous states do not have more area than flat states.
